Think Pot

Many people become the slave of circumstances, instead of the master of them.

He that does the most, talks the least of what he is doing.

Wasted time, means mispent money.

People who seek to excuse their faults, are only half repentant of them.

Discouragements only make the brave more resolute.

Fate has in store for men exactly what they are preparing themselves.

It would be worth knowing, how many of those who smile upon us, really hate us.

He who travels with hope, shortens his journey.

Courtesy and grace of manner are not veneer, they are polish.

The Lord expects those who ask his help, to do something themselves besides praying.

No greater hero than he who conquers a bad habit.

Having stored more oil than was necessary, the Standard company insists that somebody must pay for the evaporation.

The Chicago street railways announces that they are willing to sell, but have not yet mentioned one of the interesting details, which is the price expected.

The production of eggs in United States exceeds in value that of anthracite coal, but no frust has yet attempted to convert the indefatigable hen into an octopus.

Neither Nelson nor Paul Jones had to worry about coal, and their simple rule to sail in without ceremony has many admirers even in these days of strategic science.

A drop of ink is a mighty thing. With one stroke of the pen the other day the capitalization of the Northern Securities company was reduced from $395,000,000 to $3,900,000, and nobody seems to be a cent the poorer.

The last survivor of the war of 1812, 105 years old, thanks the New York board of aldermen for its congratulations, but remarks that the assurance of a public funeral is a matter so far in the future, judging by the way he feels, that it need not be considered.

The New England Passenger Association has trailed in with other railroads of the United States in offering a one fare rate for the round trip to Portland during the Lewis and Clark Fair. Though the railroads throughout the country will undoubtedly reap larger profits by the low rate than would be possible if they restricted travel with a higher rate, enterprising members of the various passenger associations responsible for the low rate are entitled to praise for their liberal-minded policy.

Secretary Taft is going to Tokio. Who will hold the lid down in his absence?

Secretary Taft has published a statement, in its management of the Panama railway, will not discriminate for or against any steamship line operating between the isthmus and ports of the states. Further, the rates charged will be such as will pay the cost and return a reasonable profit, irrespective of the effect upon transcontinental traffic.

That settles a point that has been giving the critics some concern. It was assumed by them the government would continue the discrimination in the interest of the Pacific Steamship company and the transcontinental roads, and there has been much criticism appearing in print based upon that theory.
