Never let an opportunity pass to say a good word for your town and its institutions.

Clean up the streets and alleys, and the town will look better and it might have a beneficial effect upon the general health condition of the city.

Walla Walla has a saddle tree factory which employs a dozen men and does business on a working capital of about three thousand dollars. It would seem that a similar concern might be made to pay here.

If you can't give the stranger or your neighbor a pleasant look, don't look at him at all. If you have completely soured upon the world you had better get a position tending a furnace where you will be out of sight.

The Observer is in receipt of the first number of the first volume of the "Maverick", printed in Baker City, Oregon and published and edited by J W Connella and L Bush Livermore which appeared before the reading public on Saturday, May 13th.

If the succeeding numbers of the publication are as newsy and unbiased as the first issue, then it is a paper to be welcomed by the people. According to the salutary editorial, the "Maverick" is well named, as it bears no man's brand. The publishers, in a manly manner, say that they have no excuse to offer for the "infliction" of the paper on the public, but state it is published for the revenue they may legitimately obtain.

The Observer gives them the glad hand on their debut and wishes them success if they run the paper as indicated in the editorial.
