ECONOMY OF OSTEOPATHY

Measured by results—which are the sole standard for judging the value of medical treatment—osteopathic treatment is highly economical. When one is benefited or cured by this method the improvement is usually permanent, because it is not built upon an artificial foundation. That is to say, relapses are the exception after one has completed osteopathic treatment.

Then, too, there are no prescriptions to be filled, and not often are an expensive rest and change of climate ordered. This one fact that patients can stay right at home and go on with routine business or social duties while under the care of an Osteopath is in itself a significant item of economy.

Another thing: Osteopathic treatment is economical from the standpoint of conserving one's vitality. It never injures one organ or system by strong and dangerous drugs, administered with the hope of helping another. This will be appreciated by those who have lost digestion from drug treatments to "cure" rheumatism.

Lastly, it is usually the case that one gets much of general good from osteopathic treatment, whether the main ailment has been under treatment has proven curable or not. One patient with an old incurable fibrous goitre, for instance, was much delighted to find he had recovered hearing in one ear that had been useless from catarrhal deafness for ten years. A patient who is being treated for "nervousness," too, will be almost certain to find digestion helped, the bowels regulated and circulation improved. Thus, one can scarcely take a course of osteopathic treatment without receiving substantial benefits; and we submit that, as medical and surgical practice goes, Osteopathy is justly entitled to be known as "the most economical of treatments."

TIMBER LAND. ACT JUNE 3, 1878 NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION

U. S. Land Office, La Grande, Oregon
Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the act of Congress of June 3, 1878, entitled "An act for the sale of timber lands in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada, and Washington Territory," as amended to all the Public Land States by act of August 4, 1901, Gertrude J Lind, of Minn., County of Crow Wing, State of Minn., has this day filed in this office her sworn statement No 3325, for the purchase of the NE 1/4 of Sec No. 20, Tp No. 3, South Range No. 36, E. W. M. M.
And will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for its timber or some than for agricultural purposes, and to establish her claim to said land before the Register and Receiver of this office at La Grande, Oregon, on Monday, the 13th day of June, 1905.
And she names as witnesses: Peter J Walters, John F Sanborn, Martha S Bean and Mary I Murphy, all of Brainerd, Minn.
ANY and all persons claiming adversely the above described lands are requested to file their claims in this office on or before said 13th day of June, 1905.
E. W. Davis, Register.

erected, and 12 have erected handsome buildings. The following are the states represented: Oregon, Washington, California, Utah, New York, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, Arizona, Missouri, Illinois, Wisconsin, North Dakota, Idaho, Montana.

Probably the most interesting of any of the state buildings is that of California, a replica of four of the Franciscan missions, around which are clustered so much of historical significance. The structure is planned in the form of a Greek cross, the facade of each wing representing one of the old missions for which the state is renowned.

ATHLETIC GAMES

Athletic games in general have been arranged for the exposition period. The games will be national in character embracing football, base ball, field and track, swimming, fencing, wrestling, boxing, etc. Athletes from all over the United States will compete.

Stockraisers of the United States, Canada and Mexico have taken a lively interest in the show and some of the best breeds in the world will be on exhibition.

A notable series of conferences has been arranged for the exposition, embracing religion, education, civics, charities and correction, labor, science history and woman's work, the dominant idea being to make a showing of all the forces which have been material in the development of Western America. Notable men and women from all parts of the world will deliver addresses. On Sundays there will be undenominational services addressed by leading preachers of all denominations.

More than 40 national conventions, bringing as many thousand delegates, will meet in the auditorium at the exposition during the summer.

THE BUILDINGS

All of the main exhibit palaces are in the style of the Spanish renaissance except one, the Forestry Building, which is of true American type being constructed of hewn logs in their virgin state, thus exemplifying in this condition the timber resources of the Pacific coast. In its construction two miles of five and six foot fir logs, eight miles of poles and tons of shakes and cedar shingles were used. It is 206 ft in length by 102 ft in width and its extreme height is 70 ft. One of the largest logs contains enough timber to build a one story cottage 40x40 feet in size.

The program as rendered in full was as follows:

Overture, "Festival" (Weber), Innes' band. Assemblage called to order by the president of the exposition at 12 o'clock noon.

Notification by wire to President of the United States of the exposition management's readiness to receive signal to open the exposition.

President Roosevelt touches a golden key at White House in Washington transmitting electrical energy which rings chimes in the United States government building and starts machinery of the exposition.

President Goodie then declares the Lewis and Clark centennial exposition formally opened to the world.
