On account of the extremely long passenger trains that have been coming through this city in each direction the number of water plugs along the main track for the purpose of filling the tanks of the coaches has not reached far enough to water all the coaches when the train was in one position. As a result, the trains were compelled to move up, then stop and put water in the rear coaches, thus necessitating a great deal of delay. To remedy this, the company is putting in two new water plugs and the coaches can now be attended to properly without moving the train.
