Bought An Eagle

Johnie Dordan has long wanted to have a real Eagle all his own, and yesterday an opportunity presented itself which seemed to have been specially provided for him.

The opportunity came along with a small boy who offered for sale a bird which he claimed to be a young eagle, and he also expressed his willingness to part with the same for the small sum of thirty cents. Johnie bought. Of course he could not pass that long sought opportunity without securing that for which his heart had been yearning for so these many moons. The bird, the Eagle, the Lord of the air, was his, and was at once placed in a secure place, and the friends all notified. Chief of police Rayburn was sent for to deliver the address of welcome on behalf of the town, and general celebration was to be the order of the day.

The officer came, with two teams of condensed oratory securely wrapped up in his red bandana and carefully placed in his helmet, but one look was sufficient to demonstrate to his practiced eye that the embryo Eagle was only a chicken hawk, and that of two mature years. The chief took Mr. Dordan out behind the brain box and broke the news as gently as possible, and Mr. Dordan is now out looking for that boy who secured those thirty cents under false pretenses. He says the case is a serious one, and that he is thinking of placing the case in the hands of United States District Attorney Heney.

Councilman John Kennedy and Mr. Mix of Iowa, returned last evening from Catherine creek where Mr. Kennedy went to visit his son. Mr. Kennedy states that the alfalfa crop on his son's place is most excellent, and the farms along Catherine creek all appear in splendid condition.
