THE WATER QUESTION

The question of a water supply for this city is beginning to receive serious consideration at the hands of the people of this city, and it is well that it should. It is a well known fact that the present supply is not sufficient to meet the demand, and the demand is becoming greater as the city increases in size. The city council has appropriated a small sum with which to test one or two of the springs above the city, and it is just possible that a water supply may be discovered there. La Grande has reached the stage where no very limited source will be sufficient to meet its requirements. As the city uses in the neighbor of half a million gallons of water daily, when the city undertakes to increase its water supply it must provide at least that amount, and due consideration should be accorded the fact La Grande is bound to grow.

TRUTH STRANGER THAN FICTION

If a novelist were to weave into his story the plot that has just been unfolded in the court at Rome, a majority of readers would doubtless pronounce the tale thrilling and sensational, but implausible. Many would even declare its incidents impossible. An Italian count employed as his valet a man closely resembling himself. The understudy was sent to public and private functions in his master's stead, while the count pursued his hobby, which seems to have been the same as that of the unfortunate French king, Louis XVI.

While the master played lock-smith, the valet impersonated him in society. Here he met his master's wife, from whom the count had for some time been estranged. The countess, misled by the resemblance, was deeply gratified by the unexpected attention paid to her by the man she deemed to be her husband. The valet proved himself a villain, an exposure followed, and the deceived countess committed suicide. Here, indeed, are the essentials for a novel of the d'Annunzio type.

Certain resemblances in this story to the plot of Mrs Thurston's brilliant and popular recent English novel, "The Masquerader," as it is called in this country, will occur to all readers of fiction. In the English story, however, the denouement avoids the unpleasant and tragic features of this Italian scandal. Nevertheless, the latter furnishes a startling commentary upon the certainty of those critics who declared that such an exchange of personalities as the English novelist has described was wholly fanciful and could never take place in real life.

The threshing machines that have begun work all report good yields, and it is evident that the million bushel mark will be reached this season and then some to spare. A million bushel crop means much to this valley and to this town. Together with the good crop and apparent good prices Union county will be one of the most prosperous counties in the state. A million bushels means that every mill in the valley will run to its full capacity. With the splendid wheat showing and good beet indications there is every reason to look forward to a banner year for each and every citizen in this county.

Finally she took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds which cured her, and today she is well and strong." It kills the germs of all diseases. One dose relieves.
