BUNCH OF GROUSE VISIT BAKER CITY

One of the most peculiar events chronicled in the history of Baker in many years, occurred at an early hour yesterday morning when a large bunch of grouse flew in from the country and paid a visit to their city neighbors. Evidently the birds knew that the closed season was still on for they sat around on telephone wires and telegraph poles fearlessly taking in the sights. A few naughty boys and men who should have known better, but whose stomachs evidently got the best of them, threw rocks at the birds, but so far as learned, not one was bagged and many a fine dinner in view was indefinitely postponed. Hunters believe that the birds were driven into the city by a current of wind, lost their bearing, and became confused in their surroundings. It did not take them long to hike away, however, to other parts, and the tantalized sportsmen immediately polished up their guns and bought a new supply of shells ready for the 15th.
