Fell Into a Well

Troy, Idaho, August 16.—Axel Bohman had a miraculous escape from serious injury at the Troy Lumber & Manufacturing company's plant. A depth of 20 feet had been reached.
Three men were in the well and Bohman was standing on a board at the top, when the board slipped, precipitating him head first into the well, with the board following. He struck on the rocks at the bottom on his shoulder without striking either of the men at the bottom, and, strange to say, was uninjured, with the exception of a slight bruise on the shoulder and one on the ankle, where he was struck by the falling board. None of the other men were injured.
