LAKE IS STILL FILLING

Los Angeles, Nov. 21.—Through great underground fissures, rent by earthquake shocks, the waters of the Gulf of California are pouring into the old Salton sea to sea level.

Doubt no longer exists as to the origin of this vast inland sea, which now skirts the main line of the Southern Pacific for nearly one hundred miles and stretches away on either side of the track twenty-five miles to the foothills.

Attempts to stem the tide have ceased after ten months of persistent effort by the railway and the expenditure of upward of $100,000.

Six weeks ago an expensive engineering feat shut off the waters of the Colorado river, which were flowing into the basin and which were supposed to be supplying the waste of tossing waves which were slowly but surely reclaiming the desert and threatening the destruction of the railway right of way and a score of settlements.

But the salt flood continued to rise at the rate of half an inch a day. Three spur tracks, built by the Southern Pacific are now under water. A fourth is being built and even before it can be placed in commission waves will wash its rails.

Southern Pacific engineers now admit for the first time that this strange tide cannot be stemmed by the hand of man. With fifty miles of their main line already under water, and with spur tracks melting away before the waves almost before the steel is spiked to the ties, they have retreated to the mountains and are surveying for a new route which shall be well beyond the reach of the destructive elements.

Fourteen earthquake shocks last May and June, the first and the last three of considerable violence, are now admitted to have occurred.

These shocks are supposed to have opened subterranean fissures not far from the divide between the old Salton basin and the shores of the Gulf of California. This divide is some forty miles in width, of rock of volcanic nature.

Opinion as to the cause of the new sea was divided between the earthquake theory and overflow from the Colorado and the latter was accepted as more reasonable, especially as investigation showed where several streams formed by seepage from the Imperial near Yuma were pouring volumes of water into the desert. But this flow has for six weeks been stopped and the waters continue to rise.

Today every building at Salton, with the exception of the depot, is surrounded by water, and most of them are partially submerged.

Gangs of men are working waist deep in water, as they have worked since spring, to keep the line open for slowly passing trains. No attempt is made to hold back the waters, those in charge being satisfied to lay steel and ties as the tracks are constantly being pushed back toward the hills. Fifty miles of temporary track is now in commission, and only for short stretches is the ties being bolstered by sacks of rocks and constantly watched by track walkers.

A Creeping Death.

Blood poison creeps up toward the heart causing death. J. E. Stearns, Belle Plaine, Minn., writes that a friend dreadfully injured his hand, which swelled up like blood poisoning. Bucklen's Arnica Salve drew out the poison, healed the wound, and saved his life. Best in the world for burns and sores. 25c at Newlin's Drug Store.
