TANBARK IS VERRY SCARCE

Washington, Dec. 6.—Prof. Willis L. Jepson, of the university of California, a collaborator with the Forest Service is now in Europe, where, in connection with university work, he is devoting special attention to the study of the tanbark industry in the European countries, for the purpose of obtaining a broader view of the tanning industry of the Pacific Coast which the Forest Service is investigating. A chief point in his study abroad will be the effort to determine the value and the sources of the tanning materials which Pacific Coast tanners derive by importation from European sources. Not only will statistics be gathered, but a comparison will be made of the quality of leather obtained from domestic and imported tanning extracts, with a view of finding and recommending for use on the Pacific Coast the best methods of tanbark production, and especially of extension and maintenance of present resources in order that the home supply of bark may be so conservatively used as to make importation unnecessary.

The tanbark oak of the Pacific Coast, which is preeminently the west American source of tanning material has been so severely cut that despite its wide distribution and its once plentiful supply there is increasing danger of its exhaustion.

Saved By Dynamite

Sometimes a flaming city is saved by dynamiting a space that the fire can't cross. Sometimes, a cough hangs on so long, you feel as if nothing but dynamite would cure it. Z. T. Gray, of Calhoun, Ga., writes: "My wife had a very aggravated cough, which kept her awake nights. Two physicians could not help her; so she took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which eased her cough, gave her sleep, and finally cured her."
