AMUSEMENTS

IBSEN'S "GHOSTS"

The presentation of the great drama, "Ghosts" last night at Steward's opera house was indeed a drama with a moral. The piece was executed with but five actors but their interpretation was the very best and strongest. A simple parlor scene in which a doctor characterizes this drama and the theme presented by the author makes it a difficult piece to properly render. Miss Grace Lockwood, as Mrs. Alving and Harry Mestayer as Oswald Alving, occupied the center of the stage the whole evening with their strong acting. The only attraction to be compared with it this season is "When Knighthood was in Flower."

An interruption took place in the last act when rowdies in the gallery started clapping their hands. Mr. Mestayer stopped and administered to them a fitting rebuke.

MONDAY NIGHT

Morning Star Homestead No. 632 gathered at Logus hall last evening, the event being an entertainment given by the Adams Sisters, Lilliputian ladies, from the Lilliputian Islands. The program consisted of songs, duets, dialogues, recitations and the different selections rendered with dignity and charming grace which would be hard to match anywhere. The Greek an art tableaux are deserving of especial mention, the various poses given in such statuette likeness were a rare treat. One pretty feature followed another in untiring sequence. The program as a whole was finely executed, and the little ladies scored a pronounced and decidedly artistic success.—Fraternal News, Portland, Ore.

The Lilliputian Sisters (Misses Lucy and Sarah Adams) gave a charming entertainment. The program consisted of songs, duets, dialogues, recitations and posings especially adapted to the performers. Applause was enthusiastic and complimentary remarks were heard on every hand.—Boston Times.

M. E. church, Monday night. Admission 25c, children 15c.
