AMUSEMENTS

ABSOLUTE PERFECTION

"Absolute perfection." "The best ever taken." That is the way the Britt-Nelson pictures are criticised by everyone who sees them. When the white screen is made ready, everyone leans forward with a worried look, expecting good entertainment, yet hearing for blurs, defects, occasions at the most important times. Nothing of the kind occurs. Nothing goes wrong. The pictures flow from the reel like water gliding over a smooth current. No blurs, no breaks. Nothing left out. Every detail of the fight is there. No explanations or apologies are needed, and nobody has to announce at frequent intervals: "Owing to a cloud, the next round is a trifle indistinct." Those pictures are perfection in fullness, completion and detail, and leave nothing to be desired. As portrayals of a great fistic battle, as landmarks in the progress of the photographic art, they are unparalleled.

J. W. Coffroth, president of the Colma (Cal) Athletic Club, where the fight occurred, is the owner of the copyrighted films.

These pictures may be seen at Stewards Opera House Wednesday evening Jan. 3rd.

WESTERN LIFE

Rocky Mountain life, with its exciting scenes of pioneer days in the mining camp of Cripple Creek will be portrayed in a rousing manner at Steward's opera house, Friday, January 5th.

E. J. Carpenter, the people's favorite producer, has produced a worthy successor to "A Little Outcast." This statement is proven by the phenomenal success of his latest great drama, "At Cripple Creek." The wild scenery in the heart of the Rockies forms a magnificent background for any drama, and when Hal Reid's versatile art plays upon the feelings of an audience amid scenes of unsurpassed beauty, the effects are thrilling. "At Cripple Creek" is a four act drama abounding in splendid heroism and scenes of sparkling humor and quaint drollery. The first act culminates in the exciting rescue of three innocent girls from the clutches of Martin Mason, a vile hal breed and keeper of a saloon known as "The Temple of David." The second act opens in Rift Canyon, near Joe Mayfield's mountain home. A pretty scene occurs here between the child Tatoo and Joe, who is the owner of the Last Dollar mine and champion of innocence at "Cripple Creek." While the heart stirring escape of Joe Mayfield from the death trap laid for him in the Last Dollar mine and his rescue of Belle Gordon makes the third act one of the most novel and thrilling ever witnessed on the American stage. The fourth act reveals the interior of Joe Mayfield's new home the evening he weds Belle Gordon. This love story of startling episodes, terminating in chivalrous rescues and deeds that make the pulse of excitement leap high, carries the heart of the spectator. Stage sets of exciting beauty and novel effects enhance the strongly dramatic scenes. A cast of unusual strength has been secured by the management, making "At Cripple Creek" at once a production as artistic in interpretation as it is magnificent and picturesque in setting. Steward's opera house, Friday Jan. 5th.

ASA THOMPSON ILL

Asa B. Thompson, the well known Butter creek cattleman, was brought to this city Saturday evening suffering from a severe case of typhoid pneumonia. From the train he was taken to St. Anthony's hospital where he is being attended by Dr. C. J. Smith. Mr. Thompson has been suffering for several weeks, and his present illness is the result of a relapse which he suffered a few days ago.—East Oregonian.

The Exact Thing Required For Constipation

"As a certain purgative and stomach purifier Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets seem to be the exact thing required, strong enough for the most robust, yet mild enough and safe for the children and without that terrible griping so common to most purgatives," says R. S. Webster & Co., Udonia, Ontario, Canada. For sale by NEWLIN DRUG Co.

CONDITION COULD HAVE BEEN EVEN MUCH WORSE

The Following Address of Welcome was Delivered to the Delegates of the Press Association Who Landed in Los Angeles During the worst Cold Snap

Dear beloved brethren, cheer up! The worst is yet to come. You are thirty odd in number, and you represent some of the biggest newspapers beyond the West. You got yourselves together at your employer's behests and came out of your snowstorms and your sleet, your knife-edged winds and your zero skies, away and away by limited train to the velvet lawns and poppy fields of Sunset Land and the December summer of the heart's desire. You came to drink in the goodness of Southern California in mid-winter and incidentally (whenever you were able) to write poetic prose about life at Yuletide in the loveliest climate on earth. Oh, yes you did, I know.

The devil, then! They landed you hence in the middle of a cold snap that challenges the memory of the oldest real estate inhabitant of the earth. They sat you down to a feast of excellences in the West—and gazed you with derisive mockings when your oratorical images grasped firmly the table-edge and rose slowly to make them a speech. They put you to bed at 6 of a Thursday morning, as the cold gray dawn was breaking up in chunks—and routed you out at 7 to be trawled to the beach. They fed you there when you hungered not for the sight or smell of food, and made you speak when you had rather fallen down in sleep. They herded you aboard a little steamer that was not big enough to hold your growthful heads, and churned you back and forth on the enraged bosom of the Pacific for eight eternal hours off of land. They delivered you not upon the shores of the Magic Isle, but took away from you the accumulated largess of their boasted California hospitality and fed that same to the fishes. Sore and sick and yearful for something, you know not what, they churged you back to mainland, shaken in stomach and in soul. And then, unsettled and unpeppered, they carted you off to Verdugo Park and set spiced bull's heads before you and saw that you gorged on beans.

But, dearly beloved brethren, cheer up! They haven't yet introduced you to How-ton nor made you listen to a John R. Haynes speech. Los Angeles Times.

The new Laxative that does not grip or nauseate. Pleasant to take.
