CLEANLINESS

As milk is the natural food for the young, containing within itself all the requirements of the body, and as any adulteration is injurious to the system, (either from absorption or otherwise) therefore the health of the consumer, and especially the young, depend to a great extent upon those who handle the milk. And as there are so many ways in handling the cow as well as the milk after being drawn from the cow. Every consumer should visit the place from whence he gets his milk (no matter if it is surrounded by a high board fence) and see how the cow and the milk are handled before using it as a food for the baby.

LA GRANDE SCHOOL OF MUSIC

PROF. DAY, PRINCIPLE.
MRS. DAY, ASSISTANT.

This is one of the best musical institutions in the state, and that people in this city and valley are beginning to discover the advantage of this school. The system is the latest and most practical, and includes all the latest discoveries in the art of teaching music. The school is divided into two departments: No. 1 is for beginners from 5 years of age and are taught the first three grades. This is no kindergarten system but far superior. In No. 2 the grades are from 2 to 5. Here they graduate. Pupils take one or two lessons a week as they desire. No scholars will be permitted to remain in this school who do not study. Opposite the Foley House over the candy store. Phone. 473.

FEVERS—CONTINUED
Germs constitute the chief and sole cause of fevers, in the minds of the general public, and even with some poorly read doctors. Something to kill the germs is the public cry, and these poorly read physicians often ostensibly give something for the purpose. Yet it is known full well that any drug used internally that will kill germs will also destroy the cells of the body and even life itself.

True, germs are a cause of fever, but are secondary. Germs cannot propagate or even live except the resistance of the issue be weakened. This weakening, then, is the first cause and the one to be attended to. Nature, in the white blood cells, has provided ample protection against germs. These cells, under the microscope, may be seen containing many germs which they have encased and killed.

What then is the logical treatment? First, the Osteopath corrects the displacements that weaken the blood flow through the part where the germs have located and multiplied. Then he stimulates the blood making organs that this army of white blood cells may be increased. In this way are the germs killed and the fevers aborted.

AMUSEMENTS

"YON YONSON"

The hackneyed phrase of an "evergreen" success, may with some justification be applied to the play, "Yon Yonson" has, during the past fifteen years been seen from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and has made a fortune for its management. The prospects are that it will continue to live in the affections of the public as long as the management pursues the common course of keeping the performance up to the meritorious standpoint it has attained.

An excellent company has been engaged this season, with Mr. Earl K. Mitchell in the title role. Mr. Mitchell was born on Swedish soil, achieved his first histrionic honors on Swedish stages and is now making a hit everywhere in his great dialect delineation of "Yon." The date for the return of the famous play here has been set for Monday, Feb. 12, and it will be seen at Steward's opera house fresh in its new scenic equipment.

BOX AND BASKET WOODS.
Enormous Quantities Used Make It Necessary to Find New Supplies.

The amount of wood annually consumed in the United States for packing boxes and baskets cannot be given in exact figures, but it is much greater than is generally realized. The state of Michigan alone has 48 box-making establishments, with an annual product valued at $2,272,621. Other states have a yet larger output. There is hardly a business in the whole country which would not be unfavorably affected by a serious shortage in packing-box material.

The growing scarcity and consequent high prices of most of the woods now used in this industry make necessary a search for other suitable woods and for means of regulating their supply, in order that the future demand may be met and a reasonable profit be insured to the manufacturer without overtaxing the consumer.

The study made by the forest service will include the questions of supply and demand as regards woods now used, the introduction of other woods as possible substitutes for the scarcer species, the demands of the trade, the physical and mechanical properties required in box and basket woods, and the methods of manufacturing them.

The night of that lecture came on, the lecture was given in the college chapel, one of those cold, blue places that are sometimes found in institutions established in the interest of some religious sect.

The college president sat on the platform and his face was grave. His whole aspect seemed to say: "Young man, this is a holy place, let no undue levity be attempted here."

McAndrews gave the lecture, and the audience laughed just once.

Years later, when McAndrews came to know Mark Twain, he plucked up courage to write Mr. Clemens to know if he would look that lecture over and say whether there was really anything funny in it. He got a letter in reply telling him to send it along.

Mr. Clemens returned the manuscript after with the remark that it was quite good. McAndrews then and there gave up all hope of being a humorist.—OK Sun.

HIS HOPES BLASTED.

This is the true story of a discouraged and wrecked humorist. The victim has recovered entirely and counts it as one of the fortunate things of his life that, as a funny man, he was shipwrecked early.

A few years ago there was a student in one of the leading universities for who the unthinking part of the faculty—any university has some professors not guilty of thinking much—predicted what they called a brilliant future. The young man heard of what they said and believed it, too.

He was known as the college wit. He wrote alleged humorous pieces for the college publications, and when he made speeches at college dinners his auditors were convulsed. Every one seemed to like the youngster—whose name might be McAndrews, although it isn't.

McAndrews was all the more popular because he was working his way through college. He had lived most of his life in New Jersey. One day he was approached for a contribution for an athletic fund.

He frankly said he hadn't any money to spare, but he would give a public humorous lecture in the town hall if the university would rally round him. When he announced that his subject would be "New Jersey—travels in an unknown and foreign land," there was an immediate promise to rally.

And rally that university did. Word was passed around that it was going to be a great show. The glee club was called upon to rehearse their part in Jersey in general and on McAndrews in particular.

There was a large advance sale of tickets. McAndrews rose to the occasion. He worked early and late in writing funny things into the lecture.

He called out all the alleged humorous things ever printed about New Jersey and rewrote them as his own. He picked out all the peculiarly named places in the state, such as Hoboken, and made them the scenes of the things he talked about.

McAndrews wasn't entirely satisfied with the words he wrote and soon decided that he must fortify them. He got an old brick and pounded it up fine. Then he took some white sand, that he got from a saloonkeeper, and mixed it with the pulverized brick. He bottled the mixture, sorted the bottles and labeled them as samples of New Jersey soil, to be passed around in the audience.

Something more was needed, and so he got some brown color flasks, filled them with water and labeled them "Jersey Lightning—Tanglefoot Brand." These also were to be passed around.

To add a finishing touch to theilarity of the evening McAndrews had a map made, dividing New Jersey into three districts, which he called the Mosquito, Cranberry and Backwoods districts. Then he had stereopticon views made of the mosquitoes, the life size representations of which were as big as barn doors.

The night of the lecture came. The university president and two-thirds of the faculty were present. Scores of well-known townspeople came. A judge of the court of appeals and two supreme court justices in town came also.

From the moment McAndrews opened his mouth to say "according to the latest census returns New Jersey contains 3,725 square miles, 148,756 chicken coops and 3,891,236,541 mosquitoes" every one of his sentences was greeted with laughter or audible chuckles. His stereopticon pictures caused shouts of joy.

His samples of the soil and Jersey lightning were passed about eagerly. One of the tangle-foot bottles disappeared and a stand doctor of divinity on the faculty was accused of appropriating it. It was a night of great fun, and at its close McAndrews was besieged by scores with their congratulations.

The university president generously said it was the most distinguished audience assembled in that town, with the exception of one that George William Curtis once had. As a humorist, McAndrews was a howling success. The entire assembly was sure of the brilliant success awaiting him.

In that audience was a college girl, the chairman of the lecture committee of a neighboring girl's college. She, too, caught the enthusiasm of the moment and offered McAndrews the magnificent sum of $25 to come to lecture to the girls.

He snapped it up as quickly as a get-rich-quick man does easy money. It was like finding a gold mine.

The girl chairman went home to room the lecture. She advertised McAndrews as the renowned wit of the United States, the only legitimate successor that Mark Twain would ever have.

The night of that lecture came on, the lecture was given in the college chapel, one of those cold, blue places that are sometimes found in institutions established in the interest of some religious sect.

The college president sat on the platform and his face was grave. His whole aspect seemed to say: "Young man, this is a holy place, let no undue levity be attempted here."

McAndrews gave the lecture, and the audience laughed just once.

Years later, when McAndrews came to know Mark Twain, he plucked up courage to write Mr. Clemens to know if he would look that lecture over and say whether there was really anything funny in it. He got a letter in reply telling him to send it along.

Mr. Clemens returned the manuscript after with the remark that it was quite good. McAndrews then and there gave up all hope of being a humorist.—OK Sun.
