MILK TALK No. 2.

CLEANLINESS

As milk is the natural food for the young, containing within itself all the requirements of the body, and as any adulteration is injurious to the system, (either from absorption or otherwise) therefore the health of the consumer, and especially the young, depend to a great extent upon those who handle the milk. And as there are so many ways in handling the cow as well as the milk after being drawn from the cow. Every consumer should visit the place from whence he gets his milk (no matter if it is surrounded by a high board fence) and see how the cow and the milk are handled before using it as a food for the baby.

WALLA WALLA WAS QUIET

Sunday was the quietest day Walla Walla has seen for a long time. It was impossible to separate oneself from a cent of money, except at the hotels and restaurants, and then for something to eat—nothing else. At the livery stables for a ride, the drug store for medicine, the undertaking establishments for a casket, or at the church for charity and the good of the cause, a man could spend a little money. The only other places of business that were open was the boot blacking, adjunct to a Main street barber shop, and the individual on duty did not seem to be doing a very rushing business. Every cigar store and confectionery had the "closed" sign displayed prominently on the front door. The thirsty were not only unable to get a drink but the smokers were unable to get a cigar, and had to content themselves with walking up and down the street and looking wistfully in at the closed doors.—Union.

FOR F. W. MULKEY.

Cole, a prominent politician of Portland, has been spending the past few days in this city. He stated that of course it is the object to poll all the votes possible for the candidate and that he believes the vote will be heavy. He placed Mr. Mulkey's petition on file with the county clerk this morning and will comply with the law relative to other candidates by circulating petitions in seven counties in the state, and at least 10 per cent of the precincts in each county.

AS VIEWED BY A STUDENT

The following extract from a letter sent in by a student at one of the large Osteopathic colleges may serve to indicate what the science is doing where it has become the trusted refuge of all the afflicted, whatever their ailments:

"Osteopathy may not work miracles or accomplish all it aims to, but it is the peer of any other line of therapeutics we have ever known in every disease we have seen (and we have seen hundreds already).

"We feel that we can speak from experience, too, for we were brought up as allopaths, converted early in life to homoeopathy, gave eclecticism a trial of years, have had much to do with some of the best specialists New York City affords, and can truthfully say that Osteopathy can do more, for less money and in less time, than we have ever known any of them even to attempt accomplishing. With no operations, no "blowing of horns," or the least apparent effort to attract attention, this great science has accomplished cures in cases that have been years directly under medical treatment—and that the best to be had—even the great and only Osler. Cases of paralysis, chokes, rheumatism, all sorts and kinds of diseases, and I've witnessed (with many others) these wonderful cures after seeing the cases when they first came. So, you see, it did not take years, either, to do the work. We are more than ever devoted to the science, in spite of all sacrifice and hard work."—Right Way.

GREAT BIT OF LUCK.

"I was riding uptown in a surface car in New York one day the other week," said a post office inspector, "when a mighty badlooking accident occurred.

"At Forty-second street a well-dressed, middle aged man undertook to swing himself on board the open car while it was starting, just after making the stop at that corner.

"He had got one foot on the running board, when the foot that still rested on the wet pavement slipped. He slipped and fell forward on his hands. His left leg shot beneath the wheels of the moving car.

"The conductor, who was collecting fares from the running board, frantically rang the bell to stop the car. They ran in the car, including myself, houted hoarsely, and the women on the car screamed as if bedlam had broken loose. One of the women sank back in a dead faint, and she had to be carried into a drug store after the accident was over.

"The conductor's signal to the motorman was too late. The car wasn't brought to a stop till there was a horrible grinding, jolting, crunching sound. The wheels had passed over the middle-aged man's left leg. It was mangled.

"A hundred pedestrians rushed from the crowded sidewalk to do what they could to assist the prostrate man.

"When they got to him he was lying downward, with his face resting on his hands. His hat had fallen some distance away, and his head looked gray and venerable.

"But the prostrate man was laughing just fit to kill!

"He was absolutely shrieking with merriment. He was giving vent to explosions of pure enjoyment. He positively shouted and howled in the overplus of his tremendous mirth.

"He laughed so hard that it seemed as if his sides must be just aching him.

"People away up Sixth avenue heard his happy, boisterous ha! ha! and came rushing along to see what was producing all of the fun.

"The pain of having his leg cut off has put the poor old gentleman off his head," was the sympathetic remark of a lot of us who stood around watching him and listening to his almost violent outbursts of mirth. "His agony has made him delirious, poor old chap" became the universal verdict as the middle-aged man's roars of laughter grew even louder.

"But there was something in the quality of his laughter that puzzled me, for all that it sounded to me like mighty healthy, human, rollicking laughter—laughter that was actually proceeding from the mirthful midriff of the run-over man. To my ears it didn't have even a little bit of the gruesome sound of the kind of laughter that proceeds from those in a state of delirium.

"There, there, old chap, easy now—we'll get you out of that fix all right," said some of the willing helpers, as they started to see what they could do toward disentangling the middle-aged man from the wheels of the car.

"Thanks, boys, he replied, to their amazement, in a tone of perfect understanding. "But, say," he went on "it's so blamed funny!" and he went into another paroxysm of laughter.

"The helpers looked at one another with mystified countenances.

"Why, that man's not hysterical, nor bug-house, either," said one of them. "Say, old friend," he continued, addressing the still prostrate man, "what's all this that's so infernally funny, hey? You might as well let us all in on it, hey?"

"The man who was lying face downward on the wet pavement, with his leg still under the car wheel, retrained his mirth with great difficulty long enough to gasp:

"Why, dang it all, boys, can't you see that the leg that's been run over is a woo-woo-wooden leg?" and then he howled joyously once again.

"The willing helpers looked as if they'd gone up against a sad sort of a wall, but the prostrate man's laughter was perfectly infectious, and they joined in it.

"Then they managed to pull him from beneath the car, when they saw that, sure enough, the crushed leg was of the seasoned ash variety.

"They put the good-humored middle-aged man into a cab and sent him along to the home address he gave. He waved his hand merrily at them out of the cab window before starting for home.

"Well, boys, he called out, 'I mayn't have beat the devil around the stump this time, but I'll be nanged if I haven't beat him with it!'

"Whereupon the big bunch broke into a spontaneous cheer for the old boy's gameness, and the car went head about its business."—Washington Star.
