NEW YORK AND THE PLAGUE

Danger from the Eastern Disease Has Been Diminished by Science.

It mattered not whether the suspicious cases of diseases on the Indrani were due to bubonic plague or beri-beri, there was no question as to what should be done with the remaining crew when this port was reached, says the New York Herald. The alert health officer was determined to take no chances of the development of either pest. Thus with the first news of the arrival of the ship and the account of the sickness aboard came the assurance that there was no danger of the spread of either malady. It was a proof not only of the effectiveness of modern sanitation but of the public confidence in the methods adopted that no general alarm was occasioned.

What would have produced positive panic in times gone by is now viewed as a mere matter of passing interest which does not in any way threaten the welfare of the community. Bubonic plague, which was once dreaded as the most disastrous of all disease inflictions, is now, thanks to the recent advance in science, robbed of all its real terrors. There is no longer a mystery regarding its spread nor anxiety concerning its prevention.

Even if plague cases should be brought to our shores there would be no more danger of the disease spreading than of any other infectious malady. The conditions of race, climate, diet and sanitary habits are, in this country at least, entirely against the possibilities of endemic propagation.

This has been abundantly proved in the history of the plague invasion of San Francisco. The cases, few and far between, were confined to the Chinese in Chinatown. Although the latter district is situated in the heart of a great city, there has been no spread of the pest to the white population.

It is a peculiarity with plague that the malady has a special predilection for the yellow race, and it is only in the most severe epidemics in the east that the white men are attacked. Climatic and other insanitary influences have very much to do in explaining such conditions, which are exactly opposite to those existing here.

It is now well proven that plague is due to an infectious microbe which attacks rats, fleas and flies, and by means of the latter agencies finds its way into the human system. Hence the wholesale destruction of the vermin in question is considered one of the most effective means of eradicating the disease. When proper precautions are taken in such directions there is but as much certainty of preventing the spread of the malady as of stamping out small pox or arresting a typhoid fever epidemic.

Whatever, then, may be the future developments in the case of the quarantined crew of the Indrani or of any other vessel coming here under similar circumstances, the public need have no fear of plague invasion in this country. Modern methods of prevention can make it simply a question of proper disinfection of ship, cargo and individual, wholesale destruction of rats and absolute isolation of the diseased victim. By such means we stamp out the disease as effectively as we put out a fire.

REMARKABLE RECORD

In commenting on the recent organization of the Osteopaths of New England, into a permanent society, the Boston Globe says: "Although Osteopathy is but of 10 year's growth, it was shown yesterday that it has made remarkable progress in the healing art. Over 4000 graduate Osteopaths are today practicing this means of healing, and the principal school, the American School of Osteopathy at Kirksville, Mo., has more students than Harvard Medical college. It has more colleges and more students than homoeopathy, and is second in numbers to allopathy.

Osteopathy deals with nerves largely, and makes a more thorough study of their use, abuse and injury than any other system.

No stimulant is administered to whip jaded nerves into action, no sedative is given to make it seem as if the pain had departed. The actual cause of the derangement is hunted down and an effort made to correct it. So that cures by this system, while not always rapid, are permanent."

Drs. Moore of this city, are graduates of Kirksville.

THE FIRST SHIPMENT

(Scraps News Association)

St. Petersburg Feb 15.—Eight hundred revolutionists were sent to Siberia. This is the first out of the five thousand, of the most dangerous insurgents which the government expects to deport.

When He Went Into a Deal There Had to Be Something in It for Him.

"While most of the money lost in Wall street is contributed by the Uncle Reubens," said a drummer from the metropolis, "I occasionally run across a farmer who isn't looking for the 100 per cent profit. I found such a man in a Pennsylvania village. A canvasser for a magazine had bold of him and finding him suspicious proceeded to pile it on to see what the result would be. After he had offered a dollar magazine for half price and agreed to throw in a $5 dictionary free of cost he added:

"Look here, uncle, I'm bound to have your subscription, as you are a prominent man around here. The subscription shall be 50 cents a year, the dictionary is worth the $5 asked; I will add a family Bible worth $10, send you a box of 100 cakes of soap, express you a set of silverware, add a new top buggy and harness, send along four cook books, two United States maps and a set of hits, and if you don't think that enough I'll add 50 yards of Brussels carpet worth $2 a yard. Come, now, what do you say?" Uncle Reuben thought it over for a minute and then shook his head and replied:

"Nope. If you'll add a $200 hoss for hat buggy I might think it over, but then I go into a deal I want to get my money's worth!"

Through a friend I was induced to try a sample of Foley's Honey and Tar, which gave me so much relief that I bought some of the regular size.
