UMATILLA
FRUIT MEN WILL SPRAY

"More attention will be paid to the care of fruit trees in Umatilla county this year than ever before," stated a well known fruitgrower yesterday says the Pendleton Tribune. "Fruit men in the past have, as a general thing, been negligent with their orchards and in several localities fruit trees have become diseased and badly affected. Owners have not only suffered an irreparable loss, but the fruit shipped out of this state, which had been affected with the scale especially, has received a black eye. Now, with a deputy state fruit inspector in this county, this matter, it is hoped, will be looked after diligently and fruit pests of all kinds will be exterminated."

"If the warm weather continues until the end of the month, the spraying of trees in this county will be on in full blast. Orchardists are beginning to realize the importance of spraying their trees and I understand that many are making preparations at the present time to begin the work. If the inspector rigidly enforces the spraying law I believe that in the course of a few years diseased trees in this county will be a thing of the past."

BE OPENED

John D. Lamb, Samuel Loney and H. B. Kershaw returned to Walla Walla this morning after spending a week in the vicinity of Anitona, on the Grande Ronde river, inspecting some newly discovered coal mines that are being opened up by the John P. Vollmer Company of Lewiston, says the Walla Walla Statesman.

"The Vollmer company has apparently struck a big coal deposit in that section," Mr. Lamb said this morning. "The company has tunneled into the mine, being opened up about 200 feet, and struck an immense ledge of coal. A vein 40 feet in width has already been encountered and it may be much wider than that, as the crew is still excavating at the end of the tunnel. The coal seems to be of excellent quality and resembles the Roslyn product."

"Anitona is about 30 miles from the O. R. & N. extension of the Elgin branch. Coal croppings can be seen for miles around. The Vollmer company is now financing a new company to handle the property and develop it."

Pneumonia Yields To Treatment

CONFESSION OF SCIENTISTS VERIFIES OSTEOPATHIC THEORY.— THE GERM ONLY AN AUXILIARY CAUSE AND OSTEOPATHY FINDS AND CORRECTS THE ORIGINAL ONE.

Recently this journal published comments upon the findings of the Pneumonia Commission, which has been conducting investigations under the auspices of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, and now that the annual harvest of death through this disease is beginning the facts then brought out require fresh emphasis.

Briefly, the commission found that pneumonia is caused by a germ, and its chief recommendations were made with the aim of preventing the communication of that germ from one person to another. Yet it was admitted in the report of the commission that the pneumococcus, or pneumonia germ, was found in the mouths of nineteen out of twenty-one sound and healthy persons upon whom tests were made, which would seem to indicate that efforts to prevent the communication of the germ from one person to another will be of little avail.

Other causes must be looked for, and Osteopathy long ago found them. It has long been an axiom that germs can do no harm unless they find debilitated tissue in which to nest and multiply. This fully explains why some people, in whose mouths the pneumonia germ is found, contract pneumonia, while the great majority do not. In those who contract the disease there has simply been weakened lung tissue which offered a breeding ground for germs, and the refuse from these germs brought on the acute condition. It would seem manifest that whatever brought about the weakened condition of the lung tissue was the original cause of the disease.

WHAT CAUSES WEAKENED TISSUE

Equally apparent is the truth of the proposition that, if proper nerve impulses and normal circulation of good blood existed in these tissues, they would not be weakened and would not have offered a congenial home for germs. And similarly easy of comprehension is the Osteopathic assertion that weakened lung tissue indicates interference with the nerves supplying the lungs, or with the nerves controlling the blood circulation to and from the lungs.

The Osteopathic plan of searching for the said interference and correcting it is therefore manifestly the correct one. It is for this reason that the disease has not the terrors for the Osteopath that it has for other physicians, and that such excellent results are accomplished under Osteopathic treatment. Contractured or tensed muscles are found which affect the spine or directly affect nerves and vessels; depressed or twisted ribs are found which cause crowding, and misadjusted vertebrae in the spine are always prolific causes of trouble.

OSTEOPATHIC MEASURES OUTLINED

Any or all these "lesions" may be found in a case of pneumonia, and it is through their effect upon nerves and blood vessels or upon the sympathetic nervous system, that the original weakened condition of the lung tissues, which makes the disease possible, is created. Osteopathic work includes manipulative treatment for reducing fever and lessening the immediate suffering of the patient, besides exclusively corrective measures for readjusting the parts whose mal-position has been the original source of trouble. Osteopathic treatment in pneumonia has been so successful that the outlook in these cases, which is usually not very favorable under other treatment, may be pronounced good under the new system.—The Right Way.

A Mother Testifies

This is to certify that my daughter was down for almost one year with a cold. The doctors finally pronounced it consumption. We had given up hope for her recovery. I was given a sample bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar. I gave it all to her in about three hours. It stopped the cough, and gave her rest. I sent next day and bought a 50c. bottle and began giving it. In three month's time she was well. There can not be too much said in favor of Foley's Honey and Tar. It saved my child's life.
