LET US ALL BE LOYAL

An article appearing in last night's paper under the head of "Exception Taken" written by the Stoddard Lumber Company contains the following sentence, "What we need here is people who are loyal to their own manufactures and home industries." Herein lies the secret of building up communities and cities. We are none of us as loyal to our own industries as we should be. We all kick when our own particular industry is affected but that is about all. To illustrate, the Stoddard Lumber Company objected to a certain contractor's advertisement and possibly they have a right to. The letterhead upon which their protest was written was printed in Tacoma. Possibly the printing offices of this city have a right to protest.

There are thousands of dollars sent out of this city to mail order houses. Possibly the merchants have a right to protest. Thus it goes in every line of business. The Stoddard Lumber Company is absolutely correct in the statement that "What we need here is people who are loyal to our own manufactures and home industries."

We are all guilty to a greater or less degree. Let us one and all plead guilty for past transgressions and promise to sin no more. Try it for one year and you will be surprised how the money that is sent away, if put in circulation in our city, would stimulate trade and business.

TUSKEGEE'S QUARTER-CENTENNIAL

The celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, at Tuskegee, Ala., which began today and will continue tomorrow and Friday, will commemorate much more than the completion of a quarter-century in a single institution's life. The occasion really marks an epoch of progress in the development of the negro race in America. Principal Booker T. Washington and the board of trustees of the institute, fully realizing the broad significance of this anniversary, have planned, not only to offer a display of the growth and present status of their school (including the growth of Hampton Institute, Tuskegee's parent), but to exhibit, so far as may be possible, the history, progress, and present condition of the American negro. On this occasion eminent men of both the white and the colored races of North and South have come together to exchange views on the subject of negro education and training. The record of Tuskegee for the past twenty-five years is certainly one of which any institution, North or South, might well be proud.

STATEHOOD FOR OKLAHOMA

Next to the rate bill, the most important measure before Congress last month was the Statehood bill, which had been passed by the House early in the session, and was amended by the Senate, on March 9th, so as to strike out all reference to Arizona and New Mexico. As finally passed by the Senate, the bill provided for the admission of Oklahoma and Indian Territory as a single State. The compromise suggested to the House involved an amendment providing for the submission of the question of admission to Arizona and New Mexico separately. This amendment had been passed by the Senate before the proposition to restrict the bill to Oklahoma and Indian Territory had been carried. It became clear before the bill had gone to a conference committee that the sentiment of the country, while divided as to the fitness of Arizona and New Mexico for Statehood under any conditions, was practically united on the desirability of speedily admitting Oklahoma, and the fear that a continued disagreement between the two branches of Congress would endanger Oklahoma's prospects of admission caused unusual pressure to be brought to bear on members of the House in favor of the bill as finally amended by the Senate.
