There is an ever-living story about every man worth while. Sometimes there are several, but there is always one.

The Pettus story is this: When ex-Senator Pugh was a candidate for reelection to the Senate in 1896 he went to Alabama and held court as the boss. He thought he was in control. Pettus, then as for many years, practicing law in Selindorsement for a judgeship.

"Pshaw!" said Pugh arrogantly, "you ar entirely too old to be a judge." Pettus looked at Pugh for a minute. "Well, by gum," he said, "I'm not too old to be a Senator. He wasn't. He went into the canvass and whipped Pugh, and he has been a Senator ever since.
