MOTOR CAR EXPERIMENT SUCCESSFUL

A motor car, a transportation medium that is still in the experiment stage, was trailed into La Grande this morning from Huntington. The autocar was built at Omaha for the Portland inter-urban service and is being taken there by T. M. Bierd, an expert in motor machines. The trip was very successful up to Huntington where the six cylinder engine was broken and the cars had to be trailed into La Grande. Coming over the plains the motive power carried the large car and a trailer at the rate of fifty miles an hour. The trailer is a mail and express car combination while the car containing the engine is built on the passenger coach plan and will accommodate fifty people. Motive power is a gasoline motor and rests on the front truck and is built for speed as well as for heavy work. The point of the car is pointed so as not to be retarded by the air and contains the controlling levers. The car is somewhat shaken up by its rough trip, but with the exception of the accident to the engine, everything is pointing to the fact that the experiment will be successful. There are eight of these machines in use and this particular machine is an improvement over them all.
