APPENDICITIS AND IMPACTION

The question is often asked, "Does the appendix have a function, or is it a mere remnant without function?" The Osteopath believes that the appendix has a function, for the reason that it has glands and motion, the same as the adjoining portion of the intestine. He believes that the Creator knew more than some of the modern surgeons who claim the appendix to be without use to the body.
The appendix in health is able to empty itself and carry on its work of secreting a digestive juice; but just as soon as its motion becomes sluggish or stopped it becomes impacted, or obstructed, with fecal matter, which results in acute inflammation, frequently followed by formation of pus. This is appendicitis.
What is the cause of this sluggish action of the appendix? There is apt to be pressure along the course of the motor nerves supplying the appendix, cutting off a portion or all of the nervous energy which controls this motion. This pressure is usually found where these nerves emerge from the spine, at the ninth and tenth dorsal vertebrae. Such pressure may be due to a subluxation, or slip, of the vertebrae, caused by a strain, or it may come from contracted muscles in this region, the result of result of exposure to cold or over-fatigue. There results a lowered action of this portion of the bowels with constipation, not only in the appendix itself, but also in the adjoining portion of the intestines.
Impaction of the bowel also frequently occurs at the region of the appendix, and while, strictly speaking, this is different from appendicitis, yet it may give rise to practically the same symptoms. Frequently in impaction the bowels will move each day by channeling through the center of the impacted mass, when the patient may be unconscious of any sluggish condition until the obstruction becomes complete; then the attach of "appendicitis" is soon on.
Not only the appendix, but all the bowel region is apt to become the seat of inflammation. Usually a day or two preceding the acute attack there is a dull ache and sense of fullness in the right pelvic region, due to inflation with gas from fermenting fecal matter. Recovery is the result of throwing off this accumulation, and the patient is fairly free of pain until the appendix again becomes obstructed, or the bowel becomes impacted sufficiently to cause inflammation, which is sure to happen off and on as long the pressure remains along the course of these motor nerves.
What can Osteopathy do?
If called during the acute attack, before pus is formed, our practitioners are usually able to prevent pus formation by correcting this pressure on the motor of the nerves to the appendix, thus restoring function and enabling the appendix to empty itself. In cases where the adjoining part of the intestine is also impacted, we use an enema of olive oil with the colon tube to flush out the bowel and assist in emptying the intestine. This is with absolute rest in bed, starvation diet for a few days and a careful nursing, will cure about ninety-five per cent of all cases of acute appendicitis if the treatment is undertaken before pus has formed. In cases where pus has formed in quantity before calling the Osteopath, it may require an operation to drain the pus.
In recurring or chronic appendicitis, if the Osteopath is called between the acute attacks, his treatment is to correct the pressure which causes this sluggish action of the appendix, and it will usually result in a cure, except in cases that have formed adhesions, or stricture bands, of the intestines.
Is it not better thus to remove the cause of this trouble than to remove the appendix?
A noted Eastern surgeon said that he "never saw a case of appendicitis in a poor man that required an operation." Yet this surgeon has operated on over three hundred cases of appendicitis, or supposed appendicitis, in each of which a fee of three to five hundred dollars was forthcoming! Osteopathy offers a safer, surer way to health.—Osteopathic Health

CAVALRY CAMPS IN LA GRANDE

Two troops of the 14th Cavalry posted at Walla Walla arrived in the city last night on their way to Boise, and bivouaced just outside the city. The command is under Captain Yates who also has charge of Troop A and Captain Crosby is in command of the other troop. When the marching orders were received at Walla Walla four days ago, the commissary wagon contain twenty days rations, and by careful estimation the trip is expected to last twenty days. Captain Yates stated last night that the road over the mountains were very muddy and it was impossible to make more than twenty-five miles a day. As far as could be learned the "long hike" is a practice march and while no attempt is being made at record breaking time, the command is making fairly good time considering the bad condition of the roads.
The troopers broke camp this morning and resumed their march toward Boise. They will reach North Powder today.

BIDS WANTED
Bids will be received up to 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, April 28, 1906 at the office of Dr. L. D. Reavis, for the construction of two cement cross walks, according to the plans on file at the office of City Engineer. The committee reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

A HUNGRY MAN

I never good natured, but a man who has dined well always shows his most genial side. All experienced wives know this, and many wise women in this city have learned something else.

IF THEY WANT

To strike "hubby" for a particularly large slice of his bank account, they arrange to have him dine at our restaurant. They know the better the dinner the easier he will grant their request. And they also know the best dinner is to be had right here.
