PERTINENT SPRING PARAGRAPHS

Springtime is famous for its ability to abstract energy from the human make-up. A lax individual remains and is said to be suffering from "spring-fever."

In ye days gone by it was deemed necessary for everyone in April to take large doses of strong tasting medicine. But this has all changed. Now most intelligent people have learned that "the less medicine the better." It's like whiskey—best in bottles and perfectly safe as long as it's left in them.

It is little more than natural that we should feel a bit lethargic as the first warm days arrive. Of course some of us feel it more than others—so much depends upon the bodily condition; but the best that any of us can do to offset and cure "spring fever" is to dress as lightly as we may with safety and to keep the blood in perfect circulation, the nerves operating normally.

Osteopathy builds up, in such conditions.
