SUCCESS WITH THE ANEMIAS

When you see a person who has been sound and healthy suddenly begin to shrink and waste away without other definite indications of disease, it is not unlikely that anaemia, in one of its forms is the cause. The disease represents simply the failure of the vital organs to make from the food a sufficient quantity of good, nourishing blood.

Osteopaths proceed upon the very rational assumption that the body, which has hitherto manufactured within a proper supply of good blood, would still be doing so if the process was not being in some way interfered with. They know at the outset just how each organ gets its nerve and blood supply, hence where to look for an obstruction. It is soon found, and the work of correction begins. As it advances, the activities of the body grow more nearly normal, until Nature is finally able to restore natural conditions. The organs at fault, refreshed by their proper nerve supply and nerve supply and blood circulation, get right down to their work again, and the manufacture of good blood in sufficient quantity is once more successfully accomplished. These are reasons why Osteopathy succeeds in anaemia cases almost without exception.

MISS LILLIAN LAWRENCE WITH "THE CHRISTIAN" AT STEWARD'S OPERA HOUSE TO-NIGHT

AN EXCEPTIONAL ACTRESS

No actress in America today has been so prime a favorite with theatre-goers as Miss Lillian Lawrence. After playing a short season of stock in Washington, D. C. as leading woman of the celebrated company under the direction of that capable stage director, Walter Clark Bellows, the Washington D. C. Post has this to say of her closing performance:

"The warmest demonstration was made when Miss Lawrence appeared. She is heard speaking without, before she steps on the stage. As soon as her voice becomes audible the clapping began, bursting into a perfect hurricane of enthusiasm when her familiar face appeared in the entrance. As she stepped toward the center of the stage, bouquets began to be showered upon her. Bunches of roses from all parts of the house were thrown at her feet. The actress was perfectly bewildered by the reception, but she never once lost her composure. She bowed and bowed, and then, picking up her flowers continued with her lines."

THE DIXIE JUBILEES

They are coming with their sweet songs of the Southland, their quaint negro melodies, their camp meeting songs that go home to our hearts. W. C. Buckner, who made the Tennesseans famous is the basso.
