A DON QUIXOTE CELEBRATION

(Scripps News Association)
Madrid, May 7.—The ter-centenary celebration in honor of the first publication of Cervantes' "Don Quixote" in the year 1606 began here today. The plan to hold such a celebration was suggested by some of the literary men of Spain and the government took up the suggestion and gave it the warmest and most enthusiastic support. For months the preparations for the festivities have been going on and the celebration promises to be of unusual brilliancy. It will last three days and will embrace an interesting program. Hundreds of celebrated writers in all parts of the world, artists and dramatists, have been invited and every European and South and Central American country will be represented at the various exercises in honor of the author of "Don Quixote". Only the first part of Don Quixote was published in 1606, while the second part followed ten years later. Cervantes, the author of the famous book, died in 1616. It may be safely said that there is probably not another work in any language, which has become as widely known as the story of Don Quixote the Knight Errant of La Mancha. It has been translated into nearly every modern language and is considered one of the great classics of Spanish literature. The program includes a grand State performance at the Royal Theater, a parade and a flower corso, a cavalcade artistically designed with equipments of the days of Don Quixote and other exhibitions. The city is filled with thousands of visitors from all parts of Europe and the city is handsomely decorated in honor of the dates.

LITERARY EFFECTS

A public school magazine announces: "The editor will be very pleased to hear of the death of any of the old school boys. This is only equalled by the advertisement comment that appeared once in a village newspaper in the "Sunny South" on a new haarse. It read: "The public can now enjoy the luxury of a decent burial."—Telegram
