LA GRANDE CELEBRATED THE FOURTH FORTY YEARS AGO

A Vivid Word Picture of the First Real Celebration Ever Held in this city by one Who Attended, and who has Attended Successive Similar Occasions

Forty-one years ago tomorrow morning a train of immigrants arrived in what was then La Grande, from the Missouri river. Among these Easterners was Grandma Palmer and her family, and in speaking of the event Grandma said this morning, "It is just forty-one years ago tomorrow since we made our first appearance in La Grande. Everything was in readiness for the first real fourth of July celebration ever held in La Grande. We had no more than left our immigrant train than we were invited to ride in the 'liberty wagon' which invitation we promptly accepted. In this wagon were little girls representing every state in the Union, and were hauled about the little village, located where Old Town now stands, and the three hundred inhabitants were out, dressed in their best and bent on having a grand celebration. We certainly had an interesting fourth, and in fact we were surprised at the completeness of the details, because we had the impression that we were in a wilderness. Mr. M. Baker, still residing in the Old Town, was speaker of the day and held his little audience of pioneers in rapt attention. General Stevens, lately deceased, was also a speaker. "Yes the celebration was the same as it will be tomorrow; of course we had no horse cart races, and a few of the modern amusements, were lacking but we had a patriotic little Fourth and when evening came we were tired and happy, and realized that out here in pioneer Oregon in 1865 people had all the enthusiasm and patriotism that marked the East at that time." The speaker was fifty-two years old at that time, and today is hale and hearty, and is awaiting anxiously for Thursday morning when she will take the train for Elgin and be present there on Pioneers Day, as no Pioneer Day is complete without Grandma Palmer.
