SHE APPEARS TO BE INNOCENT

There was a battle in words at the depot last evening when passenger Number 2 pulled into station. Miss Lula Linn employed at the Spokane Cafe for the past year was about to leave for the East but Mr. E. F. Johnson proprietor of the cafe caused her a short delay. About the time Miss Linn departed Mr. Johnson noticed the absence of about thirty dollars worth of table covers and aprons.

Equal to the occasion he secured a search warrant and with officers Waldron and McLachlen at his elbow he turned the contents of Miss Linn's trunks upside down and inside out in an effort to locate his missing linen. During the search the lady in question got busy with her temper and hurled pet names and epithets in a way that would put Carrie Nation in the shade. Meanwhile the search went on but revealed nothing other than the property of Miss Linn. When the fruitless investigation was over and the trunks locked her wrath broke out anew and even after boarding the train she was heard to call down vengeance on her former employer.

Mr. Johnson knows they are gone and thinks he knows how they went but is unable to lay hands on them.
