"LUCKY PUGET SOUND"

Puget Sound is to get a new drydock to cost $1,250,000, and be the largest in the world. The appropriation has already been made, the site selected, and borings are being made to determine the depth and character of the foundations. It will be a concrete dock of the latest and most approved pattern.

PRICE OF THRESHING

The price of threshing is not thoroughly established in this valley but it is reported that the machines are about to demand six cents per bushel. This is higher than ever before charged but the machine men claim that under the former prices few operators made any money when the season was finished.

MATERIAL ARRIVING.

Two car loads of sand was received today, the first material to arrive for the extensive railroad improvements to be made in this city. With $200,000 to be expended in a new round house, machine shops and improved yards and with the construction of a big new saw mill there will be unusual building activity in La Grande this summer.
