NEW CONDITIONS

More than 2000 people have applied to the internal revenue bureau for a job under the new updring sale free alcohol law which goes into effect January 1, next. It is expected by the commissioner of internal revenue when the law was passed that nearly all the alcohol to be made under the law would come from four or five big distilleries, which make nothing but high wines, and that consequently he would not have to increase his force very much to handle the new business arising from the use of free alcohol in the arts and industries, but recent information received goes to show that this supposition will probably not be realized.

The treasury department men in the South report that nearly every one of the cane sugar mills and refineries are making plans to install a distillery, and that, therefore, it is likely a considerable number of men will be needed to watch the denaturizing process for the government.

The best sugar makers are also reported to be looking into the new law with a view to going into the alcohol business for the purpose of using up their present waste products. Porto Rico sugar men are also said to have an eye up in the field promising a considerable increase in their revenues.

The treasury department reports are that some of the sugar men of the south have already made estimates to the effect that they can make alcohol at a cost of not more than 10 cents a gallon, and the internal revenue bureau experts say if the sugar men can do anything of that kind they will have the big distilleries of the middle west beaten to a standstill, as they do not believe grain distilleries can compete at any such price.

Thus, what was at first believed to be a big benefit for these large distilleries in what is known as the whisky trust promises to bring them practically nothing. It is thought in the treasury department that it will require a pretty high grade of men to represent the government at the distilleries to supervise the denaturizing, and that the places will command from $2600 a year.

With the Russian government sending out instructions to suppress the revolutionists and the revolutionists giving orders to suppress the government, it looks a little like a deadlock.

It is said that candy is adulterated with glucose, and that glucose is adulterated with sulphuric acid. But let us not be pessimistic. There is nothing to show that the sulphuric acid is not pure.—Ex.

South America will leave nothing undone for the entertainment of Secretary Root. It may even go so far as to have a revolution or two made to order for his inspection.

Penleton has recently organized a Boys and Girls Aid Society, connected with the National organization, to look after neglected, abused and wayward children.
