"WHAT CAN I DO FOR YOU"

Was the subject of Rev. B. F. Meredith's sermon delivered at the union service at the Baptist church last evening. He chose as a text, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my Brethren, ye have done it unto Me."—Math. 25: 40, and said in part:

"This is one of the most tender expressions of the interest that God has in humanity. It reveals the identity of God with all human suffering. Man has ever been the object of God's loving consideration. In the formation of the earth with its rich deposits of coal and iron, and the precious metals, with its great variety of food stuffs and its cattle on a thousand hills, God has shown His interest in us. It seems as if God, looking at us in our physical, intellectual and spiritual needs has been saying: "What can I do for you?" "When man by his sin had incurred the penalty of death, God withheld not His only begotten Son."

"The attitude of Jesus Christ toward the world was the visible expression of the Father's love. By his loving sympathy for the blind, deaf and lame, and outcasts. He gathered them about him in multitudes. He was never too busy to lend a helping hand. The children loved to nestle on his bosom. He was the Good Samaritan to every needy soul. By His tender words such as these: "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavily laden, and I will give you rest." He showed that his attitude to humanity was, "What can I do for you."

This deep concern of God for humanity should stir us in the deepest sense of gratitude. This can be best shown in loving sympathy to suffering humanity. "For the love of Christ and in His name" should be the motive of every life; while our message to every burdened heart should be: "What can I do for you?"

Such a motive and message would transform our lives and make us a power for good. One of the best illustrations of the effect of such an attitude to our fellows is afforded us in the life of M. D. Babcock. To the thousands whom he met in his pastoral labor he would say from his heart: "What can I do for you? No wonder there was such a radiance about his personality that drew the multitude to hear him, and gave the world such a shock in his untimely death.

The vexing problem of our time would find a ready solution in the light of this new experience, if the capitalist and laborer instead of assuming the attitude expressed thus: "How can I do for you?" should say from their heart: "What can I do for you?" it would not be long before we should forget that we ever had any problem. It would be the death blow to our national disgrace revealed in the divorce Court. It would bring a flood tide of blessing upon millions of souls in China and India and other heathen lands, who are now treated with indifference."

May the time come speedily when to the cry of the world's sorrowing ones, the Christian church shall respond: "For the love of Christ and in his name, What can I do for you?" In closing his discourse, Mr. Meredith read an original poem written up during the week, in which he emphasized the fact that God is best pleased when we address our gratitude to Him in loving service to suffering humanity.

WHAT CAN I DO FOR THEE
By B. F. Meredith

I
Hear me! O God above;
For Thine eternal love,
And all Thy gifts to me,
So bounteous and free,
Thou who withheldest not
Him whom Thou hadst begot;
Author of liberty!
"What can I do for Thee?"

RESPONSE
Hark thou to Me! My child;
Strive to be meek and mild;
Comfort and cheer impart
To every burdened heart;
And as earth's woes you scan,
Like the Samaritan,
Let this thy watchword be:
"What can I do for thee?"

II
Tell me, O Savior dear,
In accents loud and clear,
Thou who Thine all didst give,
Dying that I might live,
Paying sin's penalty
For lost humanity,
Jesus, so kind and free;
"What can I do for Thee?"

RESPONSE
Listen! O child of Mine;
Know'st thou some friend of thine
Burdened by weight of Sin,
Go quick and speak to him;
Or if some enemy
Of thine athirst may be,
Say to him lovingly:
"What can I do for thee?"

III
Spirit of God, Divine!
Speak to this heart of mine;
Thou who my Pilot art,
Comfort of every heart;
How can I always prove
Worthy of Thy great love?
Spirit of sympathy,
"What can I do for Thee?"

RESPONSE
List to My voice within;
Shun thou the paths of sin;
Go where the needy are,
Heart broken in despair.
Who seek from pain release—
Speak to them;— never cease—
Saying, so tenderly:
"What can I do for thee?"—
"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me."—Math. 25: 40
