ASSAULTED BECAUSE HE CARED FOR CHILDREN

Because H. T. Pheps last evening, about five-thirty, tried to do a humane act, he was knocked down and kicked in the face. However, he is not the only one to suffer as before the fight was over, Pheps' assailant was bleeding from a knife wound in the arm.

It appears that John Evans, a rancher in this vicinity, had been transacting business in the city and after getting ready to leave for home, had gathered his little girls in a wagon. Before starting, however, he had driven up to a saloon and leaving the children in the vehicle, went into the saloon to get a drink. It is asserted that for three hours he remained there while the little tots were waiting outside.

Here it was that H. T. Pheps, got in trouble. Having seen the children shivering in the cold, he took compassion on them and went into the saloon. Stepping to Evans' side he inquired if those were his children on the outside. Evans informed him that it was and that he could take care of them himself. Pheps held that the man should cease drinking and care for the cold and suffering children. This led to blows in which Pheps, aged about sixty-five, was knocked down and kicked in the face. Mr. Pheps gathered his scattered senses and arose with a drawn knife. Quickly slashing at his opponent, he administered an ugly gash in the right arm. The knife caught Evans in the muscle of the arm, causing a profuse flow of blood. The wound is a dangerous one. Mr. Pheps is a nursery man of Boise, Idaho.

Papers are out for the arrest of Evans as soon as the wounds the man is now suffering from, will permit. The charge states that he assaulted the old man and maltreated him.

NEILSON-LOGSDON

Elmer Neilson and Miss Frances Logsdon were quietly married at the home of the bride's parents on North side last Sunday at high noon. The contracting parties are both young people of this city, highly respected and have a large number of friends who extend best wishes. After the ceremony, the bride and groom left for a months' visit in Portland.
