UNVEILING ANTIETAM MONUMENT

(Scripture News Association)
Sharpsburg, Md., September 17—The monument erected in memory of the Third Fourth, Seventh and Eighth Reserves of Pennsylvania, who fell in the battle of Antietam will be unveiled this afternoon with imposing ceremonies. The monument was erected by the State of Pennsylvania and today was selected for the dedication, as it is the forty-fourth anniversary of the battle. The State of Pennsylvania provided free transportation to the battlefield for the survivors of the regiments and several hundred of them availed themselves of the opportunity to visit again the scene of the that bloody battle in which so many of their comrades fell. An interesting program has been arranged for the exercises and there will be several addresses by prominent speakers, music and singing.

The battle of Antietam was one of the most important conflicts of the great war, and proved to be the bloodiest.

The battle was the result of an attempt of the confederates to capture the city of Washington in the expectation that Maryland would then join their cause and insure the final victory. The federal army was commanded by Gen. George B. McClellan, and the confederates by Gen. Robert E. Lee.

On the 17th the real battle was begun by Hooker, who drove back the left wing of the left wing of the confederates under Jackson, while Gen. Burnside engaged their right wing. The battle raged around a corn-field surrounded by woods, to which Hooker had driven the enemy. The federal troops were twice repulsed, but gained the position on the third attack. Hooker was wounded, and the command fell to Gen. Sumner. Meanwhile on the extreme left Burnside had twice unsuccessfully tried to cross the A., but at 5 p. m. drove the enemy until a range of hills occupied by batteries checked him. At 4 o'clock he was ordered to take the position at any cost, and took the first battery. But the arrival of Gen. Hill's division strengthened the confederates, and Burnside reported that he could not hold his position if not assisted by McClellan with the federal reserve. McClellan did not meet this demand, and the federals were driven back to the bridge, which the confederates declined to attack. When darkness ended the contest, the federals had gained the advantages at most points, but not a decided success.

The federal force numbered 82,164, and that on the other side it is variously stated from 40,000 to 90,000. The federal losses were 2,010 killed and 10,469 wounded, the confederate losses have never been ascertained, though some of the writers put 20,000 as the total. The result was to put the confederates on the defensive, and to hasten the emancipation proclamation, then contemplated by president Lincoln.

A Refractionist of Uncommon Ability Makes Examination Free

Dr. W. H. Keating, the eye specialist of Salt Lake, is being kept busy. Many people are taking advantage of this noted specialist's visit here to have proper glasses fitted. The doctor grinds every pair of glasses he fits, insuring a perfect fit, and those who have gotten glasses from him consider his charges very reasonable. The doctor is not a stranger in the city as he has been making his yearly visits here for the last five years. The doctor guarantees any glasses fitted by him to be entirely satisfactory and we can vouch for the fact that he is thoroughly reliable.

Office at the Ronde Valley House.
