PRUNES DROP FROM TREES

Forest Grove, Ore.—Postmaster Atwell who is largely interested in prunegrowing, reports that during the last three days of hot weather practically the entire crop of prunes in this district has fallen. Such large quantities of fruit thus prematurely forced upon the evaporators is proving far beyond their capacity to handle. Nothing like the rapidity of the drop thus early in the season has ever been known in the history of the industry. The loss caused by cracking, due to the recent rains, was very large, but the loss occasioned by the unseasonable drop will be much larger. A heavy percentage of fruit on the ground has fermented under the influence of the hot sun. The rain and the hot weather together will cause a loss of probably one-half of the crop.
