WILL OPEN BUSINESS COLLEGE

The citizens of La Grande and the surrounding country will undoubtedly be pleased to learn that La Grande is to possess a first class business college in a few days.

Miss M. M. Slattery, president of the Standard Commercial College of Spokane has spent the past week in the city preparing for the opening of the new college which will be a branch of the Spokane College.

Miss Slattery who is a university and college graduate has had several years of experience as a high school teacher. She went to Spokane a few years ago and there opened the Standard Shorthand School, which is so widely known over the West. While other schools made English a separate course, charging extra tuition, Miss Slattery made it a part of the Stenographic course, with no extra charge, and insisted upon completing both English and spelling.

Another strong feature of the work was individual instruction instead of large class work. With the assistance of the strongest teaching force that could be secured, it resulted in the students of the Shorthand School completing the course in three or four months, instead of from six to nine months, the usual time required. Its graduates were soon recognized to be far above the average and in such demand that the school now guarantees positions to all its graduates. It was evident that with such excellent results in stenography, the same good work and great saving of time and money would result in teaching book-keeping and the other commercial branches in the same way. The demand upon the school by those desiring a commercial education has been so great, that the Standard Shorthand School has recently been expanded into the Spokane Standard Commercial College and is moving into the new Columbia Building, a six story steel structure on the corner of 1st and Howard Streets. It can boast of having the most elegant quarters in the West. The floors are laid in tiling; partitions are of solid plate glass; old mission furniture and other corresponding furnishings make the elegance of the surroundings coincide with the excellence of the work.

Miss Slattery has recently secured the service of one of the best college men in the East to manage the commercial work in Spokane and intends to devote most of her time to the school here. She stated that she will leave for Spokane on Sunday or Monday next for supplies and to arrange matters there so that she will be able to return the latter part of next week with an assistant, and begin work at once. It is hoped that every young man and woman will take advantage of this excellent opportunity for thorough training as stenographer or book-keeper, that they may demand better salaries or use this knowledge as a stepping stone to positions of prominence. Miss Slattery is particularly desirous to train some young lady as teacher of this work and can place her in a position as soon as she becomes proficient. "Teachers of stenography are very scarce," said Miss Slattery, "and it is to be hoped that more young people will prepare themselves for the profession."

Business men and other citizens of La Grande have shown much interest in making the college a success, and there is no reason why it cannot be made one of the best in the entire west. Our young people can be educated at home with about one-tenth the expense of sending them away to college. Let every one get in and do all he can to boost the Standard Commercial college of La Grande.

The new college will be located on Depot street in the northwest corner of the Sommer House block, (back of the Farmers & Traders Bank).

Monday, Oct. 22 is opening day and as a good enrollment has already been secured, a large attendance is expected. Many are arranging to enter later but the time to enter is opening day.

A special inducement is offered to all who enroll on the 22nd by giving a large reduction on scholarship.

As Miss Slattery is living at the Foley Hotel you can phone her or direct all correspondence there. Free catalogs will be sent upon application.

Miss Slattery is pleasant to meet and you will enjoy talking over the work with her in preference to writing if it is convenient to do so.

Again, let all the citizens of La Grande use every effort to boost the Standard Commercial College. We will all reap the benefit if our young people attend.

'NERVE TIRE'

I wish to call attention to two cases of "nerve tire" or nerve exhaustion, that recently came under my observation. Their similarity in certain ways was striking. One patient was a business man suffering from headache and constipation who slept very little and always awoke unrefreshed. He gave a history of a fall upon the end of the spine about three years ago, since which time he had been gradually "going down hill." When business was most exacting his brain seemed to refuse to work and a terrific headache resulted.

Upon examination I found considerable spinal tenderness the entire length with marked lesions (abnormalities) at the innervation of the digestive tract. It was evidently a case of nervous exhaustion from over-work with spinal lesions, weak ening digestion and thus helping matters along. Correcting the lesions, with a short vacation, restored him so that he returned to business with no return of the trouble.

The other case was that of a woman who had used up her nerve force by too close attention to social affairs. I was called first because the menses failed to appear at the proper time. I found the same spinal tenderness with a marked lesion in the lower spine that would affect the menses. A few treatments corrected that trouble and a persistent course of treatment afterwards removed the spinal irritation and restored the tone to her system.

These cases are similar in that both patients used up more nerve energy than they produced. Both had spinal lesions that produced individual symptoms at the weakest parts of their systems. Both also responded to common-sense treatment.

The American people are a nervous race and drive themselves to do extra work by sheer force of will. The result is a break down at some point—at the weakest organ to be affected. These abnormalities make people more liable to wear-and-tear just as any other machine that does not run smoothly. The indicated treatment is always an adjustment of the machine and moderation in its use. Such is the Kingdom of Osteopathy.—Osteopathic Health
