RIVAL TO
MT. HOOD
DISCOVERED

A startling announcement was made yesterday by Engineer T. R. Berry of the Grande Ronde Water Co., who came in from camp in the mountains where he has been making surveys for irrigation ditches and tunnels and where he received a severe injury from a land slide on the side of a mountain a few days ago. Mr. Berry discovered during the course of his surveys, a mountain peak which is several hundred feet higher than Mt. Hood, supposed to be the tallest mountain peak in Oregon and whose altitude is 11,225 feet.

Mr. Berry's investigations were strictly scientific, caused by his interest in nature and were only incidental to his work for the irrigation company. He took the elevations from the nearest government altitude corner or station by aneroid but owing to his accident did not have time to verify his measurements which he will do when the snow goes off in the spring.
His preliminary surveys and measurements show that this peak of the Eagle range of mountains, which has been named "Eagle Chief," is several hundred feet higher than Mt. Hood, the tallest hill in Oregon and one of the highest mountains on the Pacific slope. This makes a new record for distances upward in Oregon and Baker county will now carry the high banner.

"Eagle Chief" lies between Imnaha and and the head of Minam river in a straight line is 45 miles north-east of Baker City.
It is snow capped the year round and is the center of such wild scenes of beauty nature never dreamed of painting in Switzerland, or Italy. This monarch of the hills with his head in the clouds and his feet planted in fir covered hills is surrounded with a chain of the most beautiful lakes that ever reflected an Oregon sky.

Mr. Berry had with him an expert photographer who for the first time took photographs of these magnificent scenes from nature. Doubtless he will have them reproduced for the benefit of pleasure seekers and sports men. Fish and game abound in this paradise as yet almost unexplored country.

Some say that city girls are poor, ignorant things. Some of them cannot tell a horse from a cow, but they do know that Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea is one of the greatest beautifiers known. Tea or Tablets, 35 cents. Newlin Drug Co.
