JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION MEMORANDA

Norfolk Va. Oct. 18—The site of the original English settlement of Jamestown is forty miles up the James river from the Jamestown Exposition grounds. Boats will take visitors to the site twice a day.

The oldest tomb is St. Paul's church, Norfolk, Va. is that of Dorothy Farrell, who was buried there 1673 just sixty six years after the settlement of Jamestown in 1607. This churchyard will be interesting to visitors to the Jamestown Exposition as it is one of the most ancient burying grounds in the United States. There are other tombs of great interest and the inscriptions are strange and wonderful.

Among the historical relics of greatest national interest that visitors to the Jamestown Exposition may see is the arm chair in which sat John Hancock when he signed the Declaration of Independence. It is of Mahogany upholstered in leather. It stands in the vestry room of St. Paul's church in the city of Norfolk, and there it may be seen by all who visit that famous old church.

The state of California, to big to be left out of any exposition, is contemplating a vast exhibit of California's resources at the Jamestown Ter-Centennial. The fruits and minerals will be largely exploited and the lumber interests will make a great display in Forestry building.

"SKOOKEM HOUSE"

The cells for the city prison are nearing completion and in a few days the keys will be turned over to the police authorities. An Indian who heard the hammering stopped and looked in long enough to see what was going on, gave a big grunt and as he moved off was heard to say, "Huh! skookem house." That certainly expresses it as forceable as would be possible in any language. The only pleasure that any citizen of La Grande can view it, is the fact that it was made by the La Grande Iron Works, a home institution.
