AN ASTONISHING QUANTITY OF SUGAR BEETS GROWN

Fifteen thousand five hundred tons of sugar beets represent an enormous quantity of beets, but that is the amount that has been pulled thruout the Grande Ronde valley this fall, according to Mr. Bramwell of the sugar factory. Of this amount, all but a thonsand tons have been cut.

There are still many many tons of sugar beets in the ground growing prolificly, due to the warm rains that have soaked the valley in the past few days. The beet pulling industry is at a stand still because of these showers but it is hoped that ere this week is over, the rains will have subsided enough to allow resumption of the beet harvest. The only real difficulty the early rains are resurrecting, is that the roads will become so heavy and muddy that hauling will be greatly handicapped. No estimate has yet been made of what the total crop will be, but it is likely that twenty thousand tons will include the crop of the Grande Ronde.

USEFUL BOOK

The Newlin Drug Company has prepared a publication which they style "Town and Country Almanac," which will undoubtedly be appreciated by their patrons. The little book is replete with facts and figures of special interest to those who reside either in the town or country. It contains all the information usually contained in the patent medicine almanac and much that is never found in such publications. Every household in the county should have one of these booklets and every householder who will call or wire may have one for the asking If you send one of your children for the book please write a note stating that you would like the book. No charge is made for this almanac, it is free. The Newlin Drug Company, La Grande.

SUCCESS IN NERVOUS PROSTRATION

In nervous prostration, which be regarded at a culmination of nerve troubles Osteopaths have achieved unparallelled success. The cause of trouble are found to be spinal irregularities depression of ribs, and other anatomical wrong adjustments. Each case calls for special study, and special treatment, but the equipment of the Osteopath is ample for this work and the results he achieves are excellent many cures having been effected in cases where all other methods have signally failed.

It is of course frequently the case that nerve troubles are the results of other diseases, just as is often the fact that other diseases, are the result of affections of nerves; but all of these cases nevertheless come infallibly within the province of Osteopathic treatment. The primary trouble is found in misadjustment. This in some cases causes inperfect functioning of an organ, with bad nervous condition as a result; while in others it occasions directly a bad nervous condition which results in some organic disease. In either case the correction of the "lesion" or misadjustment, is the first step toward cure.

It should be remembered, of course, that Osteopathy does not rely solely upon its system of manual manipulation. It takes advantage of all proper sanitary and hygienic measures, which are often very helpful indeed, and leaves no stone unturned to give its patients the benefit of the best knowledge that there is in every case, so that the best results may be attained in the quickest possible time.
