Do not look for wrong and evil,
You will find them if you do;
As you measure for your neighbor
He will measure back to you.

Look for goodness, look for gladness,
You will meet them all the while;
If you bring a smiling visage
To the glass, you meet a smile.

ALICE GARY

An exchange pertinently remarks: "If your business is not worth advertising, advertise it for sale. A merchant who is not willing to exploit in print what he has in the way of goods and bargains and why he expects the public to call upon him, is logically supposed to have little or no reason to expect trade."

Tonight the city council consider the report of the Special Water Committee which they submit, together with Engineer Pickler's report. The council will in all probability in the near future submit the proposition to the legal voters of the city to ascertain whether or not they will vote the necessary bonds for the construction of the proposed system.

The new charter provides for the mayor whose term of office will be two years instead of one, as at present, to appoint the City Attorney, Chief of Police, City Recorder, City Engineer, Water and Street Superintendents. This one section will cause more comment than all the balance of the proposed change. There are two ways of looking at it, but it resolves itself down to this, it gives greater power to one man for either good or evil. It has been tried, it is no experiment.

The committee who has had the compiling of the proposed new charter has certainly given the matter very careful consideration. It was their intention to pick out the best of the different charters of several of the most progressive cities. It is thorough and it was the intention to cover every possible contingent, present and future. There are occasional sections that will meet with a little opposition, when people have a chance to read it over carefully. At the present time it is being gone over by the council as a whole to be approved before submitting it.

In its present form it covers forty pages of closely type written manuscript and required an hour and fifty minutes to read it at last night's council.

THE PROMOTER

Popular prejudice formerly branded the promoter as a pirate. But what would the west be without him. Let history call him what it may, in truth we know him as a promoter. Wherever progress has been, there also has been risk, speculation and promotion. The west has been developed by greed of gain. It is the hope of reward that incited progress. The promoter is the pioneer and, like a mouse in the milk, he hustles till he floats on a cake of butter of his own making. Study the progress of Oregon and learn a proper respect for the speculator, the pioneer and the exploiter, the man who promotes, organizes and develops. The man who seeks and sees, and seizes opportunity.

An irrigation ditch is promoted and 20,000 acres of dead desert, blossom and bloom into fertility. It was worth nothing and increased to $100 an acre. You can figure the percentage yourself. The promoter has added millions to Oregon where he has been paid in thousands. Let us remember that it is yet young. Its undeveloped resources are greater than those developed. So there must be more and greater promotions to come.

The American pioneer struck Oregon just when the English fur company failed in the line of settlements and civilization. One carried in the trapper and trader; the other home maker and his wife; one his traps and rifle; the other his seed wheat and plow. One shot an Indian for killing a beaver out of season; and the other paid bounty on the wolf and bear; one hunted and traded for what he could carry out of the country; the other planted and builded for what he could leave in it for his children. One counted his muskrat nests, and the other his hills of corn; one his bales of furs; the other his bushels of grain. In short, the English trade paddled his boat on every stream, and drove his dog team over every trail in Oregon, to bring out furs and peltries; while the American emigrant hauled in with his rude wagon the nineteenth century progress. Morning in Oregon dated from that time.
