THE SIGN OF THE FOUR

AMUSEMENT

TONIGHT

Mr. Theodore Lorch has added laurels to his reputation in his production of the great detective character of Sherlock Holmes in "The Sign of the Four" which will be seen at the Steward's opera House this evening. The play is under direction of Mr. Tom B. Loftus and is in every respect equal to the production as given in the largest theatres of New York and London. The mechanical effects are superb and the character delineations are of high order. There is not an uninteresting moment in the development of the plot and a pretty love story runs thru the intricacies of the detection of crime. The play as it will be presented in Steward's opera House has attracted large audiences wherever it has been produced.

MISS MAUDE FEALY

R. W. Priest, one of the representatives of "The Illusion of Beatrice", Martha Morton's latest dramatic comedy success, in which Miss Maude Fealy is this season starring, paid the OBSERVER a pleasant visit this morning, and chatted at some length about his interesting little star. He tells us that both star and play are a huge financial and artistic success, and that John Cort, who is introducing the youngest American dramatic star to the play going public, is delighted with the flattering reception accorded Miss Fealy in each city visited.

The souvenir photo friends would certainly be delighted to meet Mr. Priest, on account of the splendid collection of autographed photos of Miss Fealy, which he has in his possession. It will be remembered that Miss Fealy's photo was awarded the first prize at the Paris Exposition, in the contest of the world's most beautiful women. This, coupled with the fact that Maude Fealy was selected by the late Sir Henry Irving from all the available American and European talent, as his leading lady, places this little star in quite the most enviable position of any woman of her age the stage has ever known.

Her photo, therefore, is a most valuable asset to a collection of the world's celebrities.

RELIGIOUS DRAMA

Faith, that giant stronghold of the Christian belief, is eloquently upheld in Wilson Bare's intensely dramatic work, "The Sign of the Cross."

The devotion and heroism of the early Christians under the wanton cruelty and persecution of the Emperor Nero in Rome is presented with such striking realism in this play, which brot it at its first production at once to the notice of clergy, church people and students of religion. It has had for the years of its enormous success the voice of the pulpit as its strongest advocate.

It has had too, and still has the universal admiration of the theater going public. There is no play in which the triumph of right over wrong is so nobly expressed. The story plays upon all the emotions and the consequence of thrilling incidents keeps the audiences in a state of high strung attention and excitement. The scenes of the Roman court are rich and gorgeous in the extreme and all the costly scenes, costumes, armor and appointments are presented with absolute fidelity to the requirements of history.

The original London production of "The Sign of the Cross" will be seen at Steward's opera house, Tuesday, Nov. 27. The cast contains many prominent English and American players.
