SOCIETY

The true spirit of the season prevailed the home of Mrs. G. C. Osburn where she entertained a number of her friends on Wednesday, November 27. Gowned in Puritan costume, she greeted the guests with the simple courtesy of a sweet Pricilla of "Ye olden tyme."

As requested each wore an emblem suggesting a geographical point, the solving of which furnished much merriment. Charades were another of the afternoon's entertainment, after which a two course menu was served by the hostess assisted by the Misses Zuber and Ackles who also wore Puritan costumes.

The cozy rooms were decorated with Oregon grape and yellow and white chrysanthemums and the color scheme as well as the Puritan idea, was adhered to, throughout the menu. Oyster salad was served from a miniature Mayflower formed from a huge pumpkin each plate receiving a portion in a small boat carrying in its bow a tiny white flag with the appropriate dates: 1620-1906 in yellow. Brown bread and butter with celery sticks completed the first course, followed by Puritan wafers, fruit cake and coffee.

During the afternoon cider was served in mugs from a golden pumpkin by a dainty Puritan maiden.

Preceding the menu an article describing the first Thanksgiving feast was read by Mrs. Cary, the significance of which was evident when the guests discovered when the guests discovered that they were required to partake of the refreshments without the aid of forks.

The entire absence of formality combined with the winning graciousness of the hostess made the afternoon one to be remembered with pleasure and satisfaction by all.

Those present were: Mesdames A. V. Andrews, J. M. Berry, A. L. Richardson, J. Van Buren, W. S. Allison, Ed Kiddle, Fred Kiddle, C. H. Bidwell, W. E. Bartlett, W. G. Brenholt, Geo. Cleaver, Geo. Carpy, G. E. McCully, B. Sparrow, T. A. Rinehart, Neri Ackles, C. E. Happersett, J. K. Wright, G. A. Russell, E. D. Selders, J. T. Scroggins, T. Oliver, M. N. Mallory, J. W. Knowles, H. S. Cavana, J. T. Richardson, S. C. Williams, Misses Ackles and Zuber, and Mrs. Wilbur and Miss Wilbur of Union.

A SPLENDID DANCE

The Forester's annual ball is now a thing of history, and the members of that lodge can truthfully look back with pleasure on the success of the dance last night. The hall was tastily decorated with yards and yards of bunting arranged around the walls. Huge mirrors graced the walls and lace curtains covered the windows. The rostrum was banked with fir branches. In the center of the banking was a huge elk horn; and around that were the emblems of the order. The crowd was large but by midnight had thinned out to such an extent that dancing to the music of Thomas' orchestra was a pleasure indeed. The reception committee was especially alert and few there were who did not dance whenever they chose. Music, floor, crowd and in fact everything that makes a dance enjoyable, was of the best.

OWNS A FORD

Bird Lewis is now the possessor of a Ford automobile. The machine was purchased from Jay Van Buren who is the local agent for that make of machines. The machine was sent here as a sample but was stored by Mr. Van Buren for less than a week before it was sold. He is also agent for the Reo. He will have a stock shipped here during the winter and will no doubt find ready sale for many machines.
