GREATNESS

Honor and shame from no condition rise; Act well your part, there all the honor lies.

Fortune in men has some small difference made.

One, flaunts in rags, one flutters in brocade;

The cobbler aproned, and the parson gowned,

The friar hooded, and the monarch crowned,

"What differ more (you cry) than crown and cow?"

"I'll tell you, friend: a wise man and a fool. You'll find if once the monarch acts the monk."

Or, cobbler-like, the parson will be drunk,

Worth makes the man, and want of it the fellow;

The rest is all but leather or prunella.

—ALEXANDER POPE.

Governor Magoon says his Cuban post is the most pleasant one he has ever had. So it is useless for the Cubans to insist that the pleasure is all theirs.

More joy is felt by Mr. Bryan over the return of Missouri to the Democracy than he would have experienced had he carried ninety-nine safely Democratic states.

KEEP GOING

Nothing in nature stands still. If it isn't dying, it is growing; if it isn't growing it is dying. This is as true of men as of plants. A creature equipped with muscle and mind must use both every day or the muscle will soften and the mind will shrivel. More than that—when body and brain fail to grow, the spirit, with all its power over life and usefulness and happiness, is the first element of man to signal distress.

CHILD LABOR

Child labor is destined to bring into the coming Congress an issue as close to the people, and as squarely moral, as meat inspection and pure food—and as potent in stimulating into motion the great engines of public opinion. Federal suppression of child labor is to be accomplished by the means on which the national government has so often relied for power to legislate where its jurisdiction is uncertain. Senator Beveridge has announced that he will introduce a bill prohibiting the railroads from carrying as freight any article upon which children of less than fourteen have labored. This would, with practically perfect effectiveness, stop child labor in the cotton mills, in the coal mines, in the glass factories—everywhere. The twenty-first century student of the evolution of national legislation in the United States will marvel at the things that were done under the authority of the third paragraph of the eighth section of the first article of the Constitution: "The Congress shall have power . . . to regulate commerce . . . among the several states." Yet this provides about the only effective means for the public opinion of one region to master the will of another; and there is no more reason to doubt the constitutionality of this child labor measure than of the pure food and meat inspection bills. —Collier's Weekly.

It seems to be generally understood that Speaker Cannon will permit the subsidy bill to go through the House. There is a clear majority for it in the committee and in the House if he gives the word. The President favors it, as also does the vice-president, Secretary Shaw, Secretary Root, Secretary Metcalf and Postmaster General Cortelyou. The senate passed the bill early last session, the elections are out of the way, and the bill is endorsed by nearly all the leading commercial organizations in the country. Its advocates can therefore, see no cloud in the hori-bill graft this winter.

The startling suggestions about matrimony that are constantly being made never make any difference in the business done by the marriage license clerk.
