OSTEOPATHY AND ANATOMY

The Osteopath is obliged to be a good anatomist. He cannot practice Osteopathy at all unless he is. He is the fellow, who, when a patient presents himself, goes to work to find out exactly what the trouble is. He looks upon a man as an anatomical structure consisting of a framework of bones, a network of nerves, a tangle of muscles, a web of lymphatic ducts, a complication of ligaments, blood vessels and viscera. To untangle and locate all the multifarious organs and tissues is his business.

He goes to work to heal the sick man much the same as an engineer would fix his locomotive. He finds a nerve crossed or stretched. He finds the muscles tense or strained. He finds bones dislocated, or partly dislocated. He finds cartilages misplaced. He finds a thousand that an average physician would never discover, never dream of. Hence it is that the Osteopath must necessarily be a good anatomist.

As a rule, these doctors carry the study of anatomy much further than the allopath, the electric or the homopath. Even the most experienced surgeon knows nothing of anatomy in comparison with the educated Osteopath.—Medical Talk.
