DISEASES TREATED BY OSTEOPATHY

What diseases then in the Osteopathy justified in treating, confident that in almost every case he can do as much as, or more, than any other? Negatively, it may be said that if there is a part of the body diseased without cause, or that is not dependent upon the free circulation of the blood and lymph for its nutrition, or that is not maintained in structure and in function by its nerve supply, that part is not amenable to Osteopathic treatment.

Many think, honestly, that Osteopathy is good for chronic diseases, but that it cannot reach acute cases. By what principles of common sense or by what rules of logic one can arrive at that conclusion is hard to understand. Everyone knows that the sooner a displaced or a fractured bone is fixed, the better. Every one knows that the sooner an antidote is given for a poison, or the sooner it is removed, the better. Every Osteopath knows that it is easier to overcome an acute attack of grip and prevent bad after effects than it is to remove the complications so often found after the drug treatment of this terrible malady. The same is true of other acute diseases as well as grip. The little fire just starting is more easily extinguished than the conflagration resulting from it.

It is hard to get people to understand these simple facts because the reverse has been impressed upon them from infancy. They honestly think that they must "take something" for every ailment.—History of Osteopathy.
