AMUSEMENT

"AT CRIPPLE CREEK"

A comedy impersonation that is finding high favor with audiences wherever the play is produced is the "Ben White" "Always been black" of Frank Colton in "At Cripple Creek," to appear here Tuesday, Jan. 8.

Mr. Colton is unctuous and wholly delighted in the part of the much harolded colored man. His experience as a minstrel man and in the "specialty" field of the earlier days, has made him a comedian whose rare talents are always in great demand. Mr. Colton was one of the original members of the famous Haverly Company of the halcyon days of that organization. As an end man he ranked high in the burnt cork profession. Mr. Colton is versatile in his comedy work, his experience embracing all lines of character comedy. He is just as clever in Irish and German roles as he is in black face.

"THE LITTLE DUCHESS"

"The Little Duchess" is not only preeminent in the display of feminine charms but is also decidedly a "laughing show". The clever book by Harry B. Smith gives unlimited opportunities to the comedians—there being no less than six decided comedy characters. Charming Countess Olga von Hatzfeldt is the star of the organization, in the title role, in which she succeeded Anna Held, and she is ably supported by Robert Lett, Irving Brooks, Harry Carter, Eugene O'Brien, George Moore, Madeline Cook, Kittie Duibel, Ernest Fisher, and a large and attractive girl contingent which makes an ensemble of fifty people on the stage. "The Little Duchess" should prove a welcome offering at the Steward Opera House next Thursday night Jan. 10.
