AMUSEMENT

TONIGHT

What will undoubtedly prove one of the most satisfying events of our theatrical season will be the coming of Anna Held's most famous musical comedy success, "The Little Duchess" to the Opera house tonight with the clever little comedienne, Countess Olga von Hatzfeldt, as the star with a strong support of comedians; and a stage full of charming girls—an organization of fifty people in all.

Dainty Countess Olga has never been seen as a star West of the Mississippi before, but made many friends and admirers on this side of the "big ditch" when she appeared in the leading roles of "The Storks" and "The Burgomaster". Milton and Sargent Aborn purchased Anna Held's splendid production of "The Little Duchess", with which to star Countess Olga von Hatzfeldt, and surrounded her with a strong cast of comedians and a selected beauty chorus. According to the newspaper critics in cities where this attraction was seen last year, and during the present season, it embodies the three salient features necessary in successful musical comedy:—An abundance of comedy, striking feminine beauty and a gorgeous equipment of costumes and scenery. Most prominent in the cast supporting Countess von Hatzfeldt in "The Little Duchess" are Robert Lett Irving Brooks, Eugene O'Brien, George F Moore, Harry Carter, Madeline Cook, Kittie Duebel, Ernest Fisher, Howard Cook, and a host of others equally well selected.
