BACK TO ALASKA

Prof. C.M. Christol, now physical instructor in the Commercial Club, is going to spend two years at placer mining in the wilds of Alaska. A friend of his was in the city Sunday, and arrangements were made for the trip. By rail and boat, he will go to Waldey. At Waldey is where the interesting part of the journey begins. A dog team will convey he and his partner over the four hundred miles of ice, lying between the Waldey and Fairbanks, the destination. Twenty days, it is expected, will be required to make this ice trail. The professor has been in Alaska twice before and the novel mode of travel is not new to him. The ex-light weight wrestler is planning for a two year stay in the vicinity of Fairbanks, and during that time he will see and experience the vicissitudes of a placer miner.
