FEW TIMELY THOTS FOR THE LENTEN

Healsbury Enterprise

"Religion is a tie of love between God and man. Why should a man be a religious person? Because by his very nature he is called upon so to be. A man who is not religious falls short of being a man in the true sense of the word. For what is the essential difference between man and brute? The evolutionists claim to have proved that man's body is the result of a long process of natural selection thru the animal species. I am not disposed to question their theory. If it be understood to apply strictly to the body only, I should say it is not contrary to Holy Scripture. But man is not determined by his body which, while an essential and important constituent, is the lowest part of him.

As far as his body is concerned man is naturally one with the animals and inferior to the majority of them. But man is acknowledged to be something more than a mere animal. Why? Some reply, "Because of his reason." True; man's reason places him at the head of the animal creation, but that alone is not sufficient to essentially distinguish him from the rest. There are some animals which manifest an elementary intelligence which, though far inferior to that of man, differs in degree, not in kind. What, then, is the answer? It is because of his spiritual nature which manifests itself in reaching out to higher ends than those of the mere animal.

The animal desires are purely temporary and do not rise above the level of earth.

But man's spiritual nature raises him to a higher sphere, to that of moral responsibility.

The great and essential difference between man and the animal is that man is a moral being. The animal is neither moral nor immoral. It is not held to be responsible for its actions, and knows nothing of the sense of guilt from a moral point of view.

Thus there is a great gulf fixed between man and the animal, for which no theory of evolution or law of natural selection account. Develop an animal as highly as you will and never can you make it a moral creature. But what has man's moral responsibility to do with his being religious? Simply this, that it implies God and accountability to God. Otherwise it is entirely a shame.

Man, therefore, by virtue of his nature as a moral being, is called upon to know love and obey God. Because on this depends his moral development which characterizes and makes him a truly man.

Distinctively Nervous Troubles

HOW THEY ORIGINATE FROM PRESSURE AND ARE CURED BY ITS REMOVAL

Nerves are very easily affected in their work by pressure, caused by the misadjustment of neighboring parts of the body; and they take up their labors in normal fashion again very willingly when given a chance thru manual re-adjustment of the parts. It is these facts that make Osteopathy, which is based on re-adjustment the treatment par excellence in nervous troubles that are primarily of nervous origin, among which may be mentioned the following:

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Spinal irregularities depression of ribs, and other misadjustments are found to be causes; the condition is sometimes developed as an outcome of other diseases also. Of every case the Osteopath makes a careful study, finding the anatomical departures from normal and correcting them. Authorities agree that excellent results may be expected from Osteopathic treatment and the records show cures even in many cases which had defied every other method.

WRITER'S CRAMP

While this and numerous other local afflictions of the kind (such as are quite common among telegraphers, seamstresses, musicians and others) are fostered by the excessive use of certain sets of muscles, there is usually an anatomical defect, the correction of which will bring relief. The nerves supplying the affected muscles with motor force are usually found to be interfered with, either directly or as to blood nourishment, thus predisposing those special sets of muscles to weakness. Correction of adjustments is usually followed by complete cure.

INSOMNIA

This is a trouble in which Osteopathy has achieved extraordinary results, some times seeming to almost border on miraculous. The results are permanent and are often gained with remarkable quickness. Peaceful sleep frequently comes after a very few treatments even in cases of long standing. Occasionally a case presents greater difficulties; but it may be said that in a few other troubles may relief be as confidently expected thru Osteopathic treatment.

HEADACHE

Whether this be of the distinctly nervous type, or accompanied by nausea, it yields readily to treatment. Headache simply represents either an excessive or deficient blood supply to the head and Osteopathy easily removes the anatomical cause of it.

ST. VITUS DANCE

Due almost wholly to spinal "lesions" or misadjustments, mostly in the upper part of the spinal column. These affect the spinal cord and brain, so that the disease may show its muscular contractions at any part of the body. Correction of misadjustments is the natural remedy and Osteopathic records show that treatment seldom fails to cure or greatly relieve. Cure is the rule, even in long standing cases.—Right Way.
