YOUR WORK

Is what we want. We don't call on you one week for it and tell you the next we cannot do it for you. We want it now, and all the time. We do not think it necessary at this time to say anything about the class of work we turn out. The fact that we have been in the LAUNDRY business for twelve years in La Grande we think sufficient evidence that our work is satisfactory. Try it.

Why He is Famous.

On Tuesday, February 18, so the billboards announce, we are to have "Buster Brown," his dog Tige, his mother, Mary Jane, and his large retinue of pretty girls. Buster Brown is the most successful hero of the pictorial fiction. Successful as pictured in the prints and more so when idealized upon the stage, and this success can be attributed to the fact that many strenuous events of his many-sided career appeal to every one in an audience, from the ragged urchin, perched up in the gallery to the staid man of business occupying the higher priced seat below; every one who sees Buster, recognizes the human nature in him. The boy desires to emulate him, the man is carried back to the days when he, too, became involved in boyish scrapes that suggested the slipper cure to his mother. Then, too, Buster as a stage creation fairly exudes mirth—his career is a dance, a laugh, a song or march—a perfect kaleidoscope of rapidly moving changes, each one of that entertaining kind that evolve pure, wholesome enjoyment. Master Reed, who plays Buster, is conceded to be without a peer in the character.

Buster Brown.

Show is Feeble.

"Peck's Bad Boy" was here last evening, but the small audience in the Steward failed to appreciate the jokes. There were a few real laughable turns to the play, but on the whole the attraction is not a strong one.
