Advice to Young Men.

Robert J. Burdette has regaled the reading world with many choice morsels of literary and humorous products, but he never penned a truer bit of counsel and warning than when he wrote thus:

"Remember, my son, you have to work. Whether you handle a pick or a pen, a wheelbarrow or a set of books, dig ditches or edit a paper, ring an auction bell or write funny things, you must work. If you look around you will see the men who are the most able to live the rest of their days without work are the men who work the hardest. Don't be afraid of killing yourself with overwork. It is beyond your power to do that on the sunny side of 30. They die sometimes, but it is because they quit work at 6 p. m. and didn't get home till 2 a. m. It's the interval that kills, my son. The work gives an appetite for your meals; it lends solidity to your slumbers; it gives you a perfect and grateful appreciation of a holiday. There are young men who do not work, but the world is not proud of them. It does not know their names even; it simply speaks of them as 'old So-and-So's boys.' Nobody likes them; the great, busy world doesn't know they are there. So find out what you want to be and do, take off your coat and make a dust in the world. The hustler you are the less harm you will be apt to get into, the sweeter will be your sleep, the brighter and happier your holidays, and the better satisfied the world will be with you."

Samuel Gompers, while attending the convention of the National Civic Federation in Chicago, got into an argument with a banker. At the end of one of the banker's assertions, Mr. Gompers retorted gayly:

"Yes, it is possible to say a good word for almost any state of things, isn't it? I remember once, in a very untidy chop house in Syracuse, hearing a guest exclaim, as he took up a soiled bill of fare:

"By Jove! what an excellent idea—samples of the various dishes glued to the menu!"—Washington Star.

Grafting

Is a dead issue. So says Dr. H. C. Parker of the Indiana School of Medicine, in Collier's Weekly. We concur with him. Blue Mountain Cough Syrup will cure your cough, not as pleasant to take as some others, but it contains the ingredients that will positively and absolutely cure that cough. RED CROSS DRUG STORE.
