TRAIN IS WELCOMED

A correspondent at Winona, Wash., says of the enthusiastic reception of the O. R. & N. company's anti-summer fallow train in eastern Washington:

The most enthusiastic advocate of the "wheat demonstration train," run today by the Washington State college over the lines of the O. R. & N., never thought of awakening the interest shown at the many meetings held today.

Every point visited was a surprise to those in charge of the work, for the crowds, the interest and enthusiasm and the reluctance to leave the train shown by the farmers were an agreeable surprise to all. Coifax, the first point visited, was not expected to show many farmers, for a large farmers' convention was held there yesterday, but more than 200 people visited the cars, looked at the exhibits and as many as could heard the lectures given.

It is the purpose of the producers and agricultural authorities in charge of the train to induce the farmers of the Palouse country, through which the train is to run, to devote more of their attention to diversified farming. It is contended that by the method of summer fallowing, the use of thousands of acres of choice tillable land is lost annually by improper application of the "resting method."

Elberton, the village where the second stop was made, greeted the train with 125 enthusiasts, most of them farmers. A significant fact was that at every point visited more interest was shown in the lectures than in the exhibits. "We came here to learn more about farming and want to hear every word that is said," is the explanation offered by one farmer.

Garfield, the prosperous town at the intersection of the O. R. & N. with the Northern Pacific and electric roads, gave the greatest reception met with on the trip today. More than 500 persons, mostly farmers, crowded the opera house and the lodge hall above, where they listened to the lectures and afterward passed through the exhibition car. The people of Garfield were given a vote of thanks for the splendid entertainment given the visitors.

A luncheon was served here. The lectures of Professors Elliott, Thatcher, Lawrence and Severance were given the closest attention and the exhibition car was thoroughly inspected. Every business house in Garfield closed during the visit of the train and the merchants turned out to welcome the visiting farmers and the lecturers.

Living in Hope.

It is to be hoped that Haines will soon be made a flag stop for the "flyers." Not that we desire to travel more, but from the fact that it takes two of our citizens now to watch them go past—one to say "there she comes," and the other to say "there she goes." —Haines Record.
