CLASSICAL BALLET WITH ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA

No actor has labored more persistently or more successfully than Charles B. Hanford to dispel the murky gloom of pedantry, that had been allowed to close in about the Shakespearean drama. But for the lucid and vivacious interpretations given by Mr. Hanford and actors of his type, Shakespeare would have been left the legitimate and undisputed prey of the book worms. Mr. Hanford's forthcoming production at Steward's opera house on Monday, March 23, will be a grand scenic interpretation of "Antony and Cleopatra." No play adapts itself more sumptuously to the purpose of the scene painter and costumer. The celebrated paintings which depict the magnificence of Cleopatra's barge and the gorgeous luxury of her palaces have been carefully studied with a view to their representation on the stage where Mr. Hanford will appear as Marc Antony. The role of Cleopatra will be assumed by Miss Alice Wilson. A corps of dancers, including a premiere danseuse of renowned grace and skill is carried with the company, which this season also has its own musical director. Despite these embellishments the consideration of an adequate performance of the work as a drama remains, according to the custom uppermost in Mr. Hanford's intention. With two such players as Mr. Hanford and Miss Wilson in the cast, the average producer might easily regard his work as practically complete, with nothing to do except to "fill in" the subordinate characters. Mr. Hanford, however, has made a determined effort to assemble a company that will be worthy of the play, keeping with him such players as have demonstrated their efficiency as Shakespearean actors in the past and making special engagements wherever they seemed desirable.

In addition to Mr. Hanford as Antony and Miss Wilson as Cleopatra, John M. Kline, who played Cassius last season, will appear as Enobarbus, George C. Gunther, who played Brutus, will appear as Caesar, and Alexander McKenzie, who had the role of Casca will be seen as Alexis. The performance promises to be one of the most colossal ever witnessed on the stage of this theater.
