HANFORD IN LA GRANDE

The Charles B. Hanford company arrived in La Grande last evening from the west, and will be seen tonight in "Antony and Cleopatra" at the Steward. There are but few seats—a mere score—left, and it is safe to predict that the largest house this season will greet the talented actor.

The stupendous scale on which Charles B. Hanford's productions are made have been, from season to season, the subject of increased admiration and wonder.

ton, the subject of increased admiration and wonder. Each presentation he makes is designed to eclipse its predecessor in brilliancy of effect and elaboration of detail. It is another evidence of Shakespeare's comprehensive genius that the actor is not obliged to depart from his plays for material for unlimited scenic exploitation.

story of the Roman warrior's historic amour with Egypt's queen. The subject has been one of rare fascination for the genius that makes the stage its medium of expression. The greatest players have lent their talents to the two roles which give the play its title, and celebrated authors have done and again striving to add something new to the story, only to be eclipsed by the one great play dealing with the topic.

The chorus and orchestra will be under the direction of the company's own leader and a skilled electrician will give his undivided attention to the lighting effects which have been arranged to enhance the beauty of the magnificent array of scenery.
